ROLE OF YOUTH IN NATION BUILDING

K G Suresh

My faith is in the younger generation, the modern generation, out of them will come my workers!

- Swami Vivekananda

Suddenly several cars on Delhi's busy ITO locality just near the police headquarters screeched to a halt during peak evening hours on a working day recently. One saw two young men in jeans and T-shirt coming out of their respective vehicles. Oh God! not another incident of the national capital's notorious road rage, one prayed. Before the situation turns ugly, it was important to see whether it was possible to help someone from being beaten up. Surprise of surprises awaited as one saw these well-built youngsters trying to delicately handle a Mynah (a bird) which had somehow come on the road and was unable to fly and put it on the footpath or the divider.

And watching these helpless youngsters trying to woo the frightened bird, many in the crowd too joined hands. It was an image which was in sharp contrast to the picture drawn by many a so-called sociologist lamenting about the alleged insensitivity and selfishness of today's youth. Career seeking, irreligious, valueless, morally and ethically weak etc are some of the images some of these critics and skeptics try to portray while projecting today's youth. Drug and alcohol abuse, sexual freedom, insensitivity to social issues are some of the serious allegations levelled against them by these pessimists.

Fortunately for India, which boasts of having the world's largest youth population, the reality is far more optimistic than the stereotyped observations. The 150th birth centenary celebrations of Swami Vivekananda was an eye opener in many respects. As one travelled across the length and breadth of the country, rural areas, mofussil towns and even metros, the zest and enthusiasm of the youth who thronged the venues in schools, colleges and universities, organised events, patiently listened to speeches on the saint patriot and engaged in social work to mark the occasion proved once again that in their commitment to a strong and prosperous motherland, the Indian youth were second to none.

It was the Indian youth in the so-called self-centric cities such as Delhi who took to the streets in lakhs protesting the brutal assault on a young woman Nirbhaya. Across the country, one also saw thousands cutting across caste, class, language and religious differences and coming together against that cancer called corruption, which is eating into the very vitals of the country. They had no selfish motive whatsoever. Many left their jobs, many took leave, others absented from their classes. They all had only one mission - to make India a country of their dreams and a better place to live in.

And in the subsequent general elections, they voted for change. They did not vote on narrow, parochial or sectarian lines. They voted for good governance.

They wanted an end to corruption, better job opportunities, better roads and other infrastructure, which have been denied to them even decades after independence.

Unfortunately, in some parts of the country, there are attempts by anti-national forces aided and abetted by foreign powers to mislead the youth and lead them into a futile and disastrous path of violence. These forces are taking advantage of the growing disillusionment among the youth over prevailing corruption, unemployment etc.

In Punjab, attempts are on from across the border to pump in drugs and turn the youth population into addicts. The case is similar in North East.

Any attempt to discriminate against our citizens from any part of the country based on his or her caste, gender, language, facial features, religion etc has to be condemned in the strongest possible terms but we should also nip in the bud efforts by vested interests to project even normal law and order problem involving two individuals from different parts of the country as racism.

That Indian youth is peace loving is evident from the fact that despite having the second largest Muslim population in the world, only a handful of youth from the minority community have fallen prey to the vicious propaganda of evil forces such as Islamic State (IS).

In trouble torn Kashmir too, a couple of protesters raising the IS flag does not mean majority of the youth in the valley subscribe to their venomous ideology. On the contrary, the youth of Kashmir should be judged by role models such as young IAS officer Shah Faisal. If it is true that some youth indulge in stone pelting against security forces in downtown Srinagar, it is also a fact that police had to resort to force there to contain the large number of youth who had assembled to join the Indian Army. During a recent visit to the valley, one found that many youth from even the downtown, considered the hub of separatists, were demanding better schools and facilities such as smart classes.

It is important that our media, particularly the electronic media, play a constructive role in projecting a positive image of our youth living in sensitive

PRADHAN MANTRI KRISHI SINCHAYEE YOJANA

Bringing irrigation water to every village

Dr. A. K. Mishra

Pradhan Mantri Krishi Sinchayee Yojana (PMKSY) aspires to provide water to each and every farm. So far it was believed that despite exploiting all resources available, nearly 2/3rd of the country's total cultivable land will remain rainfed (Fig.1). Many reasons have been attributed for not being able to bring the 100 per cent cultivable land under irrigation. In the past, often the non availability of sufficient amount and quality of water was attributed as the main reasons. Remoteness and inaccessibility of a large number of farms from the nearest available water resource seems to be the prime cause of depriving a sizeable area from the benefit of irrigation facilities. In a concept paper on the Pradhan Mantri Krishi Sinchayee Yojana (PMKSY) it was argued by the Agriculture Ministry that, a large number of central schemes are currently operational to augment irrigation coverage in the country. However, the desired goal of bringing irrigation water to every village farm is still far from reality, primarily due to fragmented approach followed by existing schemes.

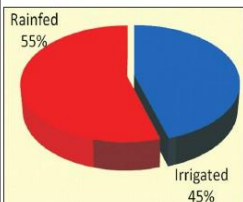

Fig. 1 Ratios of irrigated and rainfed conditions in the total cultivable area of the country (Source: Min. of Water Resources, 2011)

It is a well known fact that huge irrigation potential has already been created in the country since independence, however, poor irrigation efficiencies as well as extremely poor distribution network are the main reasons behind such poor performance of the created potentials (Fig. 2).

The PMKSY is a long awaited scientific approach of intervention from the state of India for helping the poor farmers who have been left to the vagaries of monsoon god and often treated as orphans during recurrent floods and drought situations. However, the apprehension remains as to how this dream may come true? The answer lies in the fact that a completely scientific approach needs to be followed under able guidance of subject specialists who in turn with the help of modern tools and techniques, can make this dream a reality.

Main Objectives of the PMKSY Scheme: "HAR KHET KO PANI"

The major objectives of the PMKSY are:

- Achieving convergence of investments in irrigation at the field level.
- Expanding cultivable area under assured irrigation (Har Khet ko pani).
- Improving on-farm water use efficiency to reduce wastage of water.
- Enhancing the adoption of precision-irrigation and other water saving technologies (Waste crop par drop).
- Enhancing recharge of aquifers and introduce sustainable water conservation practices by exploring the feasibility of reusing treated municipal based water for peri-urban agriculture and attract greater private investment in precision irrigation system.

The scheme also aims at bringing concerned Ministries/Departments/ Agencies/ Research and Financial Institutions engaged in creation/use/recycling/potential recycling of water, brought under a common platform, so that a comprehensive and holistic view of the entire "water cycle" is taken into account and proper water budgeting is done for all sectors namely, household, agriculture and industries.

Salient Features

The mega irrigation scheme namely PMKSY aims at convergence of investments in irrigation, expanding area under assured irrigation and improving water-use. The scheme will help in convergence of investments in irrigation, expand area under assured irrigation and improve water-use. It will be monitored by National Steering Committee (NSC) chaired by the Prime Minister and concerned Union Ministers will be the members. The Scheme seeks to promote extension activities related to farm water management and crop alignment for farmers and grass root level field functionaries. The programme architecture of PMKSY also aims at a 'decentralized State level planning and execution' structure, in order to allow States to draw up a District Irrigation Plan (DIP) and a State Irrigation Plan (SIP). DIP will have holistic developmental perspective of the district outlining medium to long term developmental plans integrating three components namely, water sources, distribution network and water use application of the district to be prepared at two levels - the block and the district. All structures created under the schemes will be geo-tagged.

The scheme has been envisaged to connect the irrigation system's three crucial components as mentioned above for optimal usage. The new irrigation scheme assumes importance as 65 per cent of the total 142 million hectares of farm land in the country are still not covered under irrigation. The PMKSY intends to focus on 'end-to-end solution' in irrigation supply chain by implementing the new programme in a "project mode" with decentralised state-level planning and execution. Instead of conventional top-down approach, the programme will provide requisite flexibility to state governments in planning and executing the irrigation projects.

Other Optional Welfare Measures for Farmers

In the last one year, the Government of India has taken several farmer friendly initiatives, which are as follows:

- A new scheme has been introduced to issue a Soil Health Card to every farmer. Soil Health Management in the country is being promoted through setting up of soil and fertilizer testing laboratories. Approximately 34 lakh soil samples have been collected and analysis is continuing.
- A new scheme for promoting organic farming "Pramparagat Krishi Vikas Yojana" has been launched to promote organic farming.
- A dedicated Kisan Channel has been started by Doordarshan to address various issues concerning farmers.
- Government is also encouraging formation of Farmer Producer organizations.
- Assistance to farmers, as input subsidy, has been increased by 50 percent in case of natural calamities. Norms have been relaxed to provide assistance from previous norm of crop loss of more than 50 percent to 33 percent for farmers afflicted by natural calamities.
- Minimum Support Price (MSP) for various Kharif crops has been increased. Bonus of Rs.200 per quintal has been announced for pulses.
- Area coverage under pulses has increased over the last year.
- Apart from this the Government of India has initiated several other welfare schemes for the benefit of farmers as well as labourers and artisans. A large number of other welfare measure schemes have also been initiated for the benefit of rural masses.
- Govt. also approves National Agricultural Market scheme, connecting farmers and traders via e-platforms for ease in sale or purchase of produce at optimal prices.

Risk and the plight of a rainfed farmer is always very high.

Programme, Planning and Implementation Procedure

The programme will be supervised and monitored at the national level by an Inter-Ministerial National Steering Committee (NSC) under the Chairmanship of the Prime Minister with Union Ministers of all concerned Ministries. A National Executive Committee (NEC) is to be constituted under the Chairmanship of the Vice Chairman, NITI Aayog to oversee programme implementation, allocation of resources, inter ministerial coordination, monitoring and performance assessment, addressing administrative issues etc. At the state level the scheme is to be administered by a State Level Sanctioning Committee (SLSC) to be chaired by the coordination at the field level. It is expected that PMKSY will provide convergence to existing schemes of water management, thus bringing efficiency to the use of water.

Project Evaluation

According to the Agriculture Ministry, the PMKSY projects will be scrutinised by the State Level Project Screening Committee (SLPSC) and sanctioned by the State Level Sanctioning Committee, already set under Rashtriya Krishi Vikas Yojana. The state agriculture department would be the nodal agency for implementation of PMKSY projects, while there would also be an inter-ministerial National Steering Committee (NSC) for periodic review of the same.

Financial Implications and Outlay

The Cabinet Committee on Economic Affairs, has given its assent and granted the necessary approval for an outlay of Rs. 50,000 crore over a period of five years (2015-16 to 2019-20) for PMKSY. The allocation for the current financial year i.e. 2015-16 is Rs. 5,300 crores. The scheme aims at bringing irrigation water to every village by converging ongoing schemes being implemented by various ministries. Under the project, a dynamic annual fund allocation methodology, which mandates states to allot more funds to irrigation sectors for becoming eligible to access funds under this scheme, is also being considered. On PMKSY funds allocation, the Finance Ministry holds its own view that; "a state will become eligible to access PMKSY funds only if it has prepared the district irrigation plans and state irrigation plans and sustained an increasing expenditure trend in irrigation sector in state plan." PMKSY funds would be given to states as 75 per cent grant by the central government and the remaining 25 per cent share is to be borne by the state government. For north-eastern region and hilly states, the funding pattern would be 90:10.

Conclusions

Like all other developmental schemes, this ambitious programme of providing water to every field requires very strong scientific and accurate assessment of resource endowment and application of proper harnessing methods of all sources of water in-situ and ex-situ. Drastic improvement in water conveyance and field application efficiency of all types of irrigation water without loss would be required. At the same time, using highly efficient methods of water deliveries on the fields as well as to plant/crop, proper drainage system design (if the soil hydraulic conductivity is extremely poor) would not only result into drastic saving of water but also covering more area. Proper irrigation system and drainage network design is a prerequisite for its implementation in the field. All this will warrant for the requirement of a huge body of consultants/engineers for developing a fool proof and accurate project plan. After having achieved such a draftinal project plan the most herculean task is to be the field implementation of the project.

The daunting tasks before the implementing agencies shall be to ensure that the total financial outlays are well utilized with minimum pilferages so that the novel objectives of this scheme could be achieved and the poor farmers of this country are benefitted. With proper training and capacity building of the project planners, the scheme can be effectively and successfully implemented in a holistic manner across the country.

Bringing irrigation water to every village

Dr. A. K. Mishra

Pradhan Mantri Krishi Sinchayee Yojana (PMKSY) aspires to provide water to each and every farm. So far it was believed that despite exploiting all resources available, nearly 2/3rd of the country's total cultivable land will remain rainfed (Fig.1). Many reasons have been attributed for not being able to bring the 100 per cent cultivable land under irrigation. In the past, often the non availability of sufficient amount and quality of water was attributed as the main reasons. Remoteness and inaccessibility of a large number of farms from the nearest available water resource seems to be the prime cause of depriving a sizeable area from the benefit of irrigation facilities. In a concept paper on the Pradhan Mantri Krishi Sinchayee Yojana (PMKSY) it was argued by the Agriculture Ministry that, a large number of central schemes are currently operational to augment irrigation coverage in the country. However, the desired goal of bringing irrigation water to every village farm is still far from reality, primarily due to fragmented approach followed by existing schemes.

ROLE OF YOUTH IN...

What is heartening to observe is that our young women too are marching shoulders to shoulders with their male counterparts in taking the country ahead. The Republic Day parade earlier this year, where US President Barack Obama was the Chief Guest, saw hundreds of smartly dressed young women officers from the Indian Army, Indian Air Force, Indian Navy, other paramilitary forces and police marching past the saluting base on the Rajpath. The entire atmosphere was infused with a sense of pride as these daughters of the nation sent across the message that they were second to none and Indian women were brave and bold to take on the world notwithstanding certain unfortunate incidents which have hogged the national headlines.

Young girls are also doing exceedingly well in important national level examinations including the civil services. Some of the leading corporate heads and entrepreneurs in the country are today women. Thanks to the NDA Government's pro active campaigns such as 'Beti Bachao, Beti Padhao', there is growing awareness in both rural and urban areas on the need to safeguard the nation's future by protecting and promoting the girl child.

Instead of merely depending on Government jobs, a large number of youth are turning to the private sector and self-employment thanks to major initiatives launched by the Modi Government such as Skill India and MUDRA Bank.

Apart from continuing with most of the welfare schemes for the minorities pursued by the previous Governments, the Modi Government has initiated several steps for their real progress as against stops, freebies and tokenism. They include USTAAD aimed at upgrading Skills and Training in preservation of traditional Ancestral Arts/Crafts of minorities; Hamari Darohar envisaged to preserve the rich heritage of minority communities in the context of Indian culture, establishment of Khwaza Garib Nawaz Senior Secondary School at Ajmer by Maulana Azad Education Foundation (MAEF) to give a fillip to minority education; creation of Nai Manzil, a bridge course to bridge the academic and skill development gaps of the Deeni Madrasa passouts with their mainstream counterparts and providing assistance for meeting the training and administrative cost of State Wakf Boards, removal of encroachment from Waqf Properties and also strengthening of Zonal/Regional offices of Waqf Boards. In fact, young Muslim artisans from other parts of the country are now demanding from the Government the huge benefits received by their brethren engaged in the handloom and cottage industries in Varanasi and elsewhere.

Former US President John F. Kennedy had once famously remarked that "ask not what the country has done for you, ask what you can do for the country." But as a welfare state, successive Indian Governments and state Governments have made sincere efforts to provide all facilities to the youth within their constraints. Undoubtedly, there is immense scope in the future too, given the latent talent of our youth. Yet, it also becomes the responsibility of the nation's youth to contribute to the country's growth and development.

Patriotism is not just about hoisting the tricolour, waving it during a win against Pakistan in a cricket match or shouting slogans hailing the country. Patriotism is not about loving the country's territory from Kashmir to Kanyakumari and Gujarat to North East. It is about sharing a fellowship with each and every citizen living in all parts of the country, treating their pains and pleasures as one's own.

We are a multi-ethnic, multi-religious, multi-linguistic country. Often we hear people talk of religious tolerance. Tolerance in Hindi means 'Bardaash Karni' or tolerating someone, which has got negative connotations. As we mature as a modern, progressive nation, it is important that we move from the conventional mode of tolerance to that of accepting and celebrating the great diversity we have. Then and then only real unity can be achieved.

Swami Vivekananda had once stated that

"so long as the millions live in hunger and ignorance, I hold every person a traitor who, having been educated at their expense, pays not the least heed to them!"

True, career, job satisfaction, friendships, entertainment are all important in one's life but it is equally important that our youth spare a thought for the teeming millions in the country for whom two full meals a day continues to be a luxury. How can one enjoy the good things in life when one sees little hands selling wares near the traffic lights? How can one just whiz past in one's automobile ignoring our fellow countrymen sleeping on the pavements with little to protect them from the vagaries of weather?

There is a tendency to think that taxes are paid only by the affluent and the middle class and thereby the poor and underprivileged are just beneficiaries. There cannot be a more mistaken notion. For every product from salt to biscuits and even beads that these poor people buy, they pay their taxes which are often used to build the educational institutions most other use at heavily subsidised rates. This is what Swamiji meant. Even if our youth spend some quality time in educating a street child or imparting him with some skills which would enable him or her to earn a decent livelihood, it would be a great service to the nation rather than throwing a penny or two into their begging bowl.

Similarly, our city based youth would do well to visit the rural and tribal areas of the country once in a while to understand the real India, which is far removed from the glitz and glamour of metros. Rather than the Government imposing a mandatory rural posting, as part of their national duty, our youth should choose to stay in the villages and utilise their talents and skills to make life better for the residents. A few heart-whole, sincere, and energetic men and women can do more in a year than a mob in a century, the Swamiji had said.

It is also important that our youth travel across the length and breadth of the country to understand the rich culture and diversity of the nation, they should savour the delicious food from different parts of the country, wear the colourful attires, read the rich literature and listen to the enchanting music from all over India. Only then and then alone, the communication gap can be bridged. The youth should come together in their crusade against poverty, corruption, unemployment, superstitions and other social maladies. Often, it is lack of understanding which leads to a sense of alienation. It is important that this chasm is bridged.

Every nation should have icons. While one may like film stars and sportspersons, role models have to be people who have selflessly served the nation and for our youth, we have no dearth of role models - from Swami Vivekananda to Dr APJ Abdul Kalam, Netaji Bose, Shaheed E Azam Bhagat Singh, Abdul Hameed et al.

The massive participation by the youth in the last general elections including in Kashmir and the Maoist affected Chhattisgarh have proved beyond doubt their immense faith in democracy, which alone can solve the manifold problems confronting the nation. For a democracy to be successful, it has to be participatory. The youth should shed their indifference to the system and work towards improving governance through constitutional provisions such as Right to Information.

The nation's condition cannot be improved by sitting in air conditioned rooms and having a pessimistic outlook. Not everyone can be a soldier or administrator to serve the nation. While one should be assertive about claiming one's fundamental rights, one should be equally conscious of one's fundamental duties as enshrined in the Constitution of India. One can effectively serve the nation by merely exercising these duties.

As Swami Vivekananda said, "Take up one idea. Make that one idea your life; dream of it; think of it; live on that idea. Let the brain, the body, muscles, nerves, every part of your body be full of that idea, and just leave every other idea alone. This is the way to success, and this is the way great spiritual giants are produced."

CAREER IN ARMED FORCES

for the call letter for direct SSB interview & then attend the 5 day SSB interview process. Upon recommendation, one must attend the medical exam and then wait for the all India merit list of TGC. Once declared medically fit, candidate joins IMA.

TGC scheme for Indian Air Force

This scheme allows a candidate to join the Technical department of Air Force under permanent commission. One must be a B-Tech. graduate from the Electronics or Mechanical branch only from a recognized university and should have scored a minimum aggregate of 60% in graduation.

The physical standards mandate that one must not have any disability, heart disease or that of blood vessels but must have a minimum chest expansion of 5 cm, normal hearing & vision.

The selection procedure involves short listing, AFSB (Air Force Selection Board) interview, medical exam & a fitness test before final candidature is announced.

The TGC scheme for Indian Navy meets the same standards and has the same selection procedure as that for the TGC Army.

How to prepare for the Combined Defence Services exam:

It's a jungle out there with competition sky rocketing and cut-offs going higher each year. The key to success in a competitive exam such as Combined Defence Services is to ensconce yourself in a regimented time-table for a few months prior to the exam. Success in the Combined Defence Services exam rests on the three pillars of English, General Knowledge and Mathematics for entry into IMA, NA and AFA. Maximum marks are 300 for the aforementioned and 200 for OTA due to the exclusion of Mathematics from the paper. There are 120 questions for English and general knowledge and 100 for the mathematics portion. Each portion is scored out of a total of 100 marks. Negative marking in the exam is to the effect of 1/3rd or 0.33. The emphasis should be on accurately answering the questions as well as on effective time - management. Students should first attempt the questions of which they are sure and try to minimize guesswork.

The English paper mandates that the candidate must have a good command over concepts of grammar and a fairly decent vocabulary. Since mastery over these cannot be achieved overnight, preparation must be planned over a few months. Books by Thorpe & Thorpe and General English by A.K. Bhardwaj are good for concept clarity & practice. The importance of Wren & Martin for grammar cannot be stressed enough. For Mathematics, books on quantitative Aptitude by and those authored for CAT preparation are excellent tools for preparation. For General Studies and Humanities, students are advised to read NCERT books for classes VIII to XII thoroughly as they are incomparable, vast store houses of knowledge.

For all the subjects, it is imperative that a student solves previous year papers for at least the last ten years if not more as this will acquaint the student with the paper pattern and ease his/her mind while attempting the actual Exam.

A strong grasp of General Knowledge and that of Current Affairs is an instrumental part of success in the CDSE. The best way to prepare is to read an esteemed newspaper daily to stay abreast of national and international events of significance. Alongside, books and magazines like Competition Success Review, Manorama, India Yearbook, Pratiyogita Darpan etc. are invaluable assets to a CDSE aspirant.

For extra help and a nudge in the right direction, one may join one of the private Academies for preparation of CDS exam.

SSB is the Personality and Intelligence Interview spread over 5 days which scientifically analyses each candidate's potential and compatibility for commission into the Armed Forces of India. The exercise is mainly a psychological evaluation of the personality of the candidate to gauge his/her potential as a future officer in the Indian Armed Forces. The tests conducted by the SSB aim at selecting individuals with officer like qualities (OLQ's).

The selection system is designed over a five day process. Day 1 is the screening test, Day 2 is the psychological test, Day 3 and 4 involve group tasks and Day 5 is the conference. The personal interview is conducted on either day 2, 3, or 4.

A career in defence has a lot to offer, but it takes dedication and work. The perks are endless - there is rock solid job security, there are no pay cuts and only increments throughout life. If you are a freshly passed out and commissioned officer in the Armed forces, you will make about Rs. 42000 per month. Other allowances vary between Rs 6000 and Rs 16000 plus DA of 60% is given. Facilities like free schooling for children, free medical facilities to dependents, canteen facilities, official vehicle for senior Officers, loan facilities for Officers, excellent accommodation wherever you are posted are icing on the cake. Facilities like swimming pool, tennis courts, squash courts etc are part of your accommodation. A healthy lifestyle is ensured because physical fitness is given utmost priority. On retirement, apart from the handsome amount that you will receive, you will get a pension throughout your life. Today, an officer with 22 years of service after retirement will get a pension of approximately Rs. 30,000 per month. Hence, a second innings post retirement is very probable and equally attractive. Moreover, one develops a tolerance to pain and tedium which holds one in good stead all through life.

One must realize that a career in the Armed Forces is the privilege of a few. It is not merely a job - it is a noble profession that you will always treasure having served in. Being a soldier is more than just courage, it is sacrificing yourself for something GREATER THAN YOURSELF!
