'At the root of poor governance is our lethargy for change'

-Pranab Mukherjee

.....How do we measure up in terms of governance after 66 years of our independence? There is little doubt that we have made great strides in almost all major areas of development.

From 3.5 per cent growth rate per annum during the First Five-Year Plan period, we achieved eight per cent per annum during the Eleventh Five-Year Plan period. The Green Revolution in the 1960s made our country self-sufficient in food grains. We have also reduced the incidence of poverty. Today, India is the third-largest economy in the world in terms of purchasing power parity.

We can certainly be proud of these achievements. But it is equally true that much more remains to be done. The challenges to our governance systems are reflected in some important international analyses that are mainly dependent on the social index. India's ranking in key governance indicators like voice and accountability, political stability and absence of violence, government effectiveness, regulatory quality, rule of law and control of corruption are lower than countries such as Brazil, France, Germany, Italy, Japan, the UK and the US.

We are at the crossroads of transformation and cannot afford to lose the momentum of change. There are several challenges we face and we should face them with determination and conviction. And, at the root of them is the issue of governance.

We have achieved remarkable progress in several of the grids that constitute good governance. In some, our achievements have been greater than others. There is still immense scope to better our participatory decision-making structure, improve the application of rule of law, enhance transparency, increase accountability, promote greater equity and inclusiveness and improve consensus based approach....

Some of the few grids. The incidence of poverty is still around 30 per cent and it is not something that we can live with. Statistics of economic progress will count for nothing if we are not able to uplift the marginalised sections of the society. Our growth, therefore, must have to be inclusive and sustainable.

Inclusiveness calls for equity in access to basic needs like education and health care. Our efforts should be directed at making the entire population literate....

The flagship schemes in the education sector, such as Sarva Shiksha Abhiyan, the Midday Meal Scheme and Rashtriya Madhyamik Shiksha Abhiyan would be addressing many of our problems.

Affordable health care should be our priority. Many people in this country are forced into poverty owing to high costs of medical treatment. It is gratifying to note that building on the success of the National Rural Health Mission, a new national health mission combining the rural mission, and a new urban mission is being envisaged with a Budget outlay of over Rs 21,000 crore in 2013-14. A healthy population holds the potential to make greater contribution to nation-building.

Another important aspect in changing our development paradigm is to be noticed today. The new terminology is empowerment through entitlement, which is backed by legal enactments. We have adopted a rights-based approach to our development process. The Rights to Education, Employment and Food Security are the core of this development strategy....

This development strategy should be implemented fully. To help empower our marginalised sections, we gave them the right to employment and education. We piloted legislations such as the Mahatma Gandhi National Rural Employment Guarantee Act, 2005 and the Right to Education Act, 2009. The process of enacting a law to provide food security to people is also in the process of completion.

The Aadhaar project, would provide every resident with a unique identification number. It would help our citizens, especially the poor and needy, to easily access several benefits and services more efficiently. The Direct Benefit Transfer scheme, launched in January, too, would leverage the Aadhaar system helping the achievement of greater transparency and reduction in transaction costs.

Our delivery systems need mending and only good governance can provide an answer to the problem. If what is meant for the poor does not reach them in the proportion it is meant to, then corruption and inefficiency are its two main causes.

Corruption is a threat to the democratic fabric of our country. It would frustrate the efforts to bring equity to all its citizens. I am happy to note that in the recent past, several steps have been taken to reaffirm our commitment to bringing more transparency in governance. Some of the steps taken include the ratification of the United Nations Convention against Corruption in 2011, membership of the Financial Action Task Force since 2010, introduction of the Prevention of Bribery of Foreign Public Officials and Officials of Public International Organisations Bill 2011, and initiation of a proposal to make bribery in private sector a criminal offence by bringing an amendment in the Indian Penal Code.

At the root of poor governance is our lethargy for change, whether it is in the implementation of schemes or adherence to values....

How grievously hurt the nation was when a young woman, the symbol of an aspiring nation, lost her life in the brutal assault in India in December last year....

It is time to reset our moral compass. The police and investigative organisations can play a crucial role in creating conditions that could engender societal changes. An alert police force and investigative agency can ensure that no crime goes unpunished. It is important to ensure speedy and thorough investigation of allegations. The prosecution should also be speedy so that the guilty are punished without delay. This would enhance the deterrent value of punishment. It would improve responsiveness, one of the most important features of good governance.

SPORT AND POLITICS

- Vidhanshu Kumar

When I started working as a sports journalist the first thing that my sports editor Sundeep Misra told me was that to understand sport you have to understand the 'politics of sports'. He was passing down a lesson that was in turn handed out to him by his sports editor many years ago. There is an uneasy confluence of politics and sport. In the modern world sport and politics are strongly entwined and understanding this relationship helps to throw light not only on sport and politics but also on culture.

The recent example from the Indian Premier League wherein the Sri Lankan players were barred from playing in Chennai clearly underlines the marked presence of politics in sports. Owing to domestic political pressure in Tamil Nadu over alleged human rights issues concerning Sri Lankan Tamils, the state government said no to Sri Lankan players. In this case sport was used as a tool of political leverage. There were many critics mixed. But is this really possible? Can sport and politics be separated from each other? What is the nature of political economy of sport? To answer these questions one has to understand the ecosystem of sport and trace key areas that shaped its boundaries.

Political economy of sport

Reform: With the rise in urbanization post the industrial revolution, by mid of the nineteenth century governments in Western Europe started allocating land designated for parks and play areas. Speaking of the situation in the United States, Goodman writes that 'by 1905 almost everyone concerned with social reform was concerned with play.'

It was also argued that while designated play areas were shaping modern cities in a big way, they were also providing for states to serve capitalist interests and at the same time become an instrument of reform and change. After the WW II gov-facilities and setting up sport institutions. Industry: Political scientists argue that one of the ways in which a globalized economy grows is through cultural activities such as music, art, sport and the mass media, especially films and television. Today large sport events are marketed worldwide, tickets sold at (monopolistic) high prices and seen 'live' on TV worldwide.

Olympics and FIFA world cup are touted as examples of largest number of people in human history engaged in one activity at the same time, and that is viewers watching these games. Globalized sport has grown to the point that is said to be a 'trillion dollar industry' today.

Sport and Development

Over the last few decades sport is increasingly used as a component to assist and augment conventional development methods and as a tool of change by itself. Wherever conventional methods

Some examples are the sport for development and peace programmes of UNESCO and UNICEF.

Whenever sporting events are held it requires a huge infrastructure to be set up in transport, hotels, general service, beautification etc. Delhi as host to Common Wealth Games 2010 saw new flyovers being constructed, more hotel rooms created, roads and rail transport services also improved. There are however arguments that these facilities were built at what cost?

Sport can be seen as stamp on the redrawing of political contours and global focus areas. While prime sport events like Olympics, Football World Cup etc were held in mostly developed countries, sample a few venues in the recent past and coming years: 2008 Summer Olympics in Beijing, 2010 FIFA WC in South Africa, 2014 FIFA WC and 2016 Olympics in Brazil, 2018 FIFA WC in Russia and 2022

Jewellery designing is an art - a unique and intriguing art. But this art was closely guarded earlier, confined to select few artisans or 'kaarigars' and handed down generation to generation. Now with the recent boom and opening up of the branded market, jewel design is flourishing like never before. And it's no longer restricted to designing traditional gold and diamond pieces either. This ever-growing industry offers immense opportunities for exclusive, contemporary, stylised and designer jewellery in keeping with latest fashion trends. Not to forget striking prospects in semi-precious and costume jewellery as well.

All in a Day's Work

Jewellery design is one of the most creative professions where you get to craft innovative jewels right from conceptualising the style and design, drawing sketches, fashioning detailed drawings to preparing structural models, computer simulations or sometimes even a full-scale prototype.

This requires you to understand the market, identify the consumer needs, visualise ideas to suit the demand and create impressive presentations to communicate your idea clearly.

But the job doesn't end at designing. Jewellery artists also have to be involved hands-on in the actual manufacturing process where craftsmen use specialised hand tools and equipments to turn the designs into exquisite, flawless pieces!

Getting Started

Formal training is essential for refining this creative skill. Both Bachelor and Masters Degree of Fine Arts include jewellery designing. Or you can opt for a diploma or certificate course offered by numerous specialist institutes in India. There are long-term, short-term and even online/distance learning programs varying from a few weeks to one to two years. Course costs range from Rs. 10, 000 to a lakh plus depending on the type of program.

These courses impart knowledge about drawing skills, design themes, colour science, diverse kinds of stones, environmental exposure, form and space, presentation, jewellery costing and fashion trends. Some even include computer-aided programs for designing jewellery and accessories. CAD eliminates tiring efforts of umpteenth redesigning on paper and imparts flexibility of exploring numerous alternatives.

These courses not only hone your designing skills, but also help you learn the basics of jewellery making techniques right from metal textures, stone settings, casting, cutting, polishing to even engraving, enamelling and electroplating. It also includes identification of gems/diamonds and testing quality of precious metals/stones. In fact, this rudimentary knowledge is crucial for becoming a good designer.

Apart from designing, you can also choose to specialise in other streams like jewellery manufacturing, gemmology, diamond grading, etc.

What it takes?

Generally, a school level or 10+2 background is essential. An art background or an internship with a design studio/jewellery designer can give you a head start in the competitive industry.

What it takes is a penchant for jewels and a flair for design. A creative and imaginative mind with an eye for detail and colours is essential. You have to be meticulous as nothing but perfection is acceptable. Being able to work with patience and concentration is also important.

It goes without saying that you have to be well-versed with the fashion scene and stay updated with the changing trends.

Career Prospects

Besides designing there is plethora of career options in jewellery design houses, fashion houses, export houses, antique/art auction houses etc. Big names like Tanishq, Swarovski, DeBeers and D'damas regularly scout for remarkable talent.

You can choose to work as an in-house artist, freelance or be a self-employed entrepreneur. Or specialise in any particular aspect of jewellery making like goldsmith, bench jeweller, lapidary, quality assurance consultant, diamond and gemstone grader, etc. But as vacancies in this field are not advertised much, you have to build and maintain a good network in the industry. Generally, jewellery designers start small by designing for the mass market and then move to custom designs as they gain prominence. And once you build your own inimitable style, you can even launch your own line or open your store!

Starting pay packets range from Rupees 10-12,000 depending on the type of work. Pay packages/incentives keep rising with top designers raking in lakhs a month.

With talent, skill, initiative and experience on your side, there is literally no limit to what you can achieve! So, unleash your imagination and love for all that glitters by converting your passion into a fascinating, rewarding and fulfilling profession!

Sport and Politics...

Sport and Nationalism

Most of the organized mass sports today are played either between national teams or between clubs that represents different communities. Both sport and nationalism derive intense devotion and there is a distinct interlink between sport and national identities.

Benedict Anderson has argued nation as 'imagined communities'. However he doesn't say that nations are mythical or false communities but in the modern world nation are among the most powerful form of social group. Weber has argued that for a group to express solidarity that have to take part in some group activity without any extrinsic reason attached to it. Sport plays a major part in this act of solidarity.

In the context of sport, nationalism is often portrayed in fevered pitch. Supporting their respective national teams fans from both sides leave no stone unturned in showing their banal spirits.

Indo-Pakistan cricket matches have many instances of fans throwing objects like water bottles, sometimes even stones at the opposition team, though this feature has subsided considerably in recent years. Football matches have seen violent riots in stadia that left scores dead. Rivalry on football pitch even led to a war between El Salvador and Honduras.

Sport and Diplomacy

At the height of diplomatic tensions between India and Pakistan in the mid 80's President General Zia ul Haq visited India to watch a cricket match. That set the ball rolling for off and on cricket diplomacy between the two countries. I was fortunate to be part of Indian Cricket team's tour of Pakistan in 2004 after a gap of many years. When tensions ran high, sporting ties were affected too. Similarly sport was used as track two diplomacy tool to thaw relations.

In the apartheid era, countries boycotted sporting ties with South Africa. At the peak of Cold War, USSR didn't take part in Montreal Olympics in 1976 and US and its allies paid it back in the next Games at Moscow by boycotting it. Relations between the US and Communist China saw a rare upswing with the visit of US team to take part in a table tennis championship in China. That was called 'Ping Pong diplomacy'. Closer home, consistent shunning of Pakistan players in the IPL post Mumbai attacks and now the curb of Sri Lankan players in Chennai just illustrate that this diplomacy has not lost its value and continues to grow.

Here are a few examples that clearly points to the confluence of sport and politics.

coot sport ties with the African nation. Almost all games were affected but some the sports that held center stage to this debate were Rugby, Cricket and Golf. From late 60's till the beginning of 90's when apartheid ended in SA, playing sports with them was suspended. After the end of apartheid India welcomed South African cricket team in 91-92. Even Nelson Mandela knew the power of sport in integrating people and once said, "Sport has the power to change the world... to inspire...to unite people."

Ping Pong Diplomacy

United States and China were Cold War enemies in the 60's and 70's when things took a sudden turn in 1971. At the world TT championship held in Japan, a Chinese player Zhuang Zedong gifted American player a silk memorabilia as 'a gift from Chinese people to US people.' This move was welcomed in international media following which Mao invited the US TT team to play in China. Mao said about Zhu, 'He not only knows good Ping Pong, he knows good diplomacy too.' This came to be known as ping pong diplomacy and led to a thaw in US-China relations. In 1972, Richard Nixon visited China, the first by an American President.

Honduras - El Salvador Soccer War

In the late 60's the two Latin American countries were already embroiled in controversy owing largely to large number of El Salvador immigrants coming to Honduras for work and finding unfair conditions to work. Against this backdrop, the two countries were locked in qualifying matches for FIFA world cup coming up in 1970. In June of 1969, the two countries faced each other in a series of qualifiers played alternately in their home venues. In the matches tensions ran high, rival fans were subjected to abuses and flags of opposing teams were burnt in front of the players. In the last qualifier played at Salvador, Honduran team was humiliated by the local organizers, their flag was burnt and instead a dishcloth was hoisted up. Honduras lost the match 3-0 and their team were escorted after the match to the airport to immediately fly back home. Next day, El Salvador dropped bombs on Honduras and a full fledged war ensued that lasted four days and left at least over a thousand dead.

In his seminal study 'Sport and Politics' Professor Alan Bairner argues that politicians use sport, that sport reflects political conditions and that sport itself contributes to political culture.

It is evident from the examples above that sport cannot be seen in isolation, that it is almost impossible to see mass sport act independent of politics. So however players

The Preliminary -2013 examination is barely a month away. The last month of preparing for any examination is the most crucial phase of a candidate's preparation because the vital inputs gained during this period can be directly converted into outputs in the examination. This is a month to consolidate previous hard work and to cover the gaps in one's preparations. One really ought to be very determined during this phase of Civil Services preparations so that the examination does not slip out of one's hands. It must be borne in mind that Civil Services (Prelims) preparation is a task in managing one's skills. By skills I mean those skills which enable you to choose the right sources of study-materials, the discreet selection of facts and figures and to keep away from a plethora of irrelevant information which the market is abound with. Without these skills, one is bound to lose the way in the middle of his journey to success. Stress on relevance is the key to success in the civil services examination. UPSC has not given a descriptive syllabus of GS for the Preliminary examination. Only its broad contours have been given. This calls for a careful thought on what actually constitutes the syllabus. One golden rule about UPSC examination is that it always focuses on the fundamentals of a topic. In other words, the UPSC questions are framed in a conceptual framework and they relate to the fundamentals of the subjects concerned. Therefore, a candidate is advised to go for the basic, standard textbooks, reputed newspapers and magazines and government publications and avoid reading guide books and compiled materials which contain irrelevant topics also and worse still, sometimes wrong information as well.

Pattern and Syllabi for the Civil Services Examination:

As is well known, UPSC has introduced a new pattern of Preliminary examination since 2011. Under the new pattern, the optional papers have been removed and a common GS paper has been kept for all candidates. This GS paper has the following syllabus:

Paper I - (200 marks) Duration : Two hours

- Current events of national and international importance.
- History of India and Indian National Movement.
- Indian and World Geography - Physical, Social, Economic Geography of India and the World.
- Indian Polity and Governance - Constitution, Political System, Panchayati Raj, Public Policy, Rights Issues, etc.
- Economic and Social Development

Sustainable Development, Poverty, Inclusion, Demographics, Social Sector initiatives, etc.

- General issues on Environmental Ecology, Bio-diversity and Climate Change - that do not require subject specialization.
- General Science.

Paper II- (200 marks) Duration: Two hours

- Comprehension
- Interpersonal skills including communication skills;
- Logical reasoning and analytical ability
- Decision-making and problem-solving
- General mental ability
- Basic numeracy (numbers and their relations, orders of magnitude, etc.) (Class X level), Data interpretation (charts, graphs, tables, data sufficiency etc. - Class X level)
- English Language Comprehension skills (Class X level).

GS Paper I:

This paper(200 marks) contains 100 questions. Each question carries 2 marks. There is negative marking also. To understand the concept of negative marking in very simple terms, if you answer three questions incorrectly, you lose the mark of one correct question. In this background, one has to be extra cautious about attempting questions blindly or on guess work. But at the same time, one can not be over cautious also. Intelligent guess based on logic or intuition, sometimes is correct. So, it is advisable to make intelligent guesses resisting the temptation to go for wild guesses.

Expected questions from different areas of the GS syllabus: Although there is no hard and fast rule about it, the breakup of questions in both papers is as follows:

GS Paper-I:

Area	No. of Questions
Indian Polity and Governance	15-20
Economy	15-20
History	8-10
Geography	6-8
Ecology and Environment	5-6
Science	7-10
Current Affairs	25-30

GS Paper-II:

This paper has unofficially acquired the acronym of CSAT(Civil Services Aptitude Test). It contains 200 marks. It has a total of 80 questions with each question carrying 2.5 marks. This paper also carries negative marking perhaps with the exception of 7-8 questions asked on decision making. Area wise break up of questions in GS Paper-II is the following:

Area	No. of Questions
Comprehension	30-35
Logical Reasoning and Analytical Ability	7-8
Decision Making	8-9
General Mental Ability	7-8
Basic Numeracy	6-7
English Comprehension	14-15

The above break up is just indicative. It is based on the last two year's UPSC questions. But it does help a candidate to prioritise his preparations.

Fundamental aspects of preparation:

There is no single formula for success in the Prelims examination. Many roads can lead to the same destination. In other words, preparation is individual based i.e. what a candidate needs for himself given his own background. Put this way, the preparation pattern is bound to differ from candidate to candidate. Yet, there are some fundamental aspects of civil services preparation as presented below:

- Holistic Preparation: Prepare for the entire syllabus not just a part of it. There is a general tendency among candidates not to take pains to cover unfamiliar areas such as General Science or mental ability etc. It can be disastrous to leave out even a small section of the syllabus.
- Balanced Preparation: It implies preparation in proportion to the quantum of the syllabus. For example, if Polity carries 20 questions and Geography carries only 8 questions, one has to obviously read more on polity than geography.
- Linking the traditional aspects with the dynamic aspects: The current aspects of the syllabus must be linked with their traditional aspects. For example, if one is studying the Judges standards and Accountability Bill, one has to go back to higher Judiciary in general and then to read the Bill in a context.
- Emphasis on current events: The magic formula for success in Civil Services examination is command over current affairs. The share of current affairs is increasing every year in the Prelims examination. It is a real challenge to command over current affairs given its vast scope. Each prominent current issue which has an important bearing on the world or India needs to be covered. In preliminary examination the following aspects of the current affairs are covered:
  1. Persons in news.
  2. Events
  3. Sports and Awards
  4. National and International Organizations
  5. Important Statistical Data

6. Important Bills, treaties etc. Broadly speaking, the coverage of current affairs is for last one year. For IAS 2013 Prelims examination, one should cover the period between January-2012 to April-2013.

Basic Sources of Studies:

GS Paper-I:

Current Events of national and international importance:

- The Hindu(newspaper)
- The Economic Times(newspaper)
- Frontline(magazine)
- Down to Earth(magazine)
- Yojana (magazine)
- Kurukshetra(magazine)

The Hindu has brought up a highly useful collection of national and international events in its supplement dated January 7, 2013. It is a good source to recollect recent events. Further, one must also consult the following sources:

- The Economic Survey
- India Year Book -2013

History: NCERT Publications.

1. Ancient India-R.S.Sharma
2. Medieval India- Satish Chandra
3. Modern India-Bipan Chandra
4. B.L.Grover-Modern India.

Economy:

1. NCERT: India's Economic Development
2. Misra and Puri-Indian Economy
3. Economy Survey 2012-2013

Indian and World Geography:

1. All NCERT books on Geography
2. Goh Cheh Leong-Certificate Physical and Human Geography

Environment and Ecology: NCERT publications on Environment and Ecology.

General Science: NCERT publications, specially its book on Biology.

GS Paper-II: The syllabus of GS Paper-II is made up of such areas that one cannot go for area specific books as it will be a time consuming and complex exercise. One has to pick books which cover comprehension, mathematics, reasoning etc for different examinations such as GRE,GMAT,Bank PO examinations etc. GS Paper-II is entirely based on self-practice with lots of test papers and minimum of books. However, some reliable books are mentioned here for self-practice on CSAT

- Conceptual Approach to CSAT Paper II-P.N.Roy Chowdhury(Pearson publication)
- Quantitative Aptitude-Dr. R.S.Aggarwal(S.Chand)
- Verbal and Non-Verbal Reasoning-Dr. R.S.Aggarwal(S.Chand)
