

RITUPARNO GHOSH: THE NEW CURRENT OF INDIAN CINEMA

— Santanu Ganguly

We never thought in our wildest nightmare that we lost Rituparno Ghosh so early. He was not that seriously ill or met any sudden accident but gone while he was in sleep. The way he left the world, such peaceful death, it might be a dream of many people, but it is a huge loss to the Indian Film Industry.

The noted Indian filmmaker, since last two decade, was quite enable to force the new audience to go to the theatre and watch film on big screen. Though he made most of his films in Bengali, but his fine ability to define the characters, mainly the women characters of his films will remain immortal in Indian Cinema. Though he started his film career with Hirer Anghy (Diamond Ring) in 1992, but Unishe April (19th April) is the first film which gave him huge success as a serious filmmaker, he got the National Award for Best Film and also noted Bengali actress Debashree Roy got the National Award of Best Actress. Debashree is a very fine actress but mostly she acted in commercial films. Rituparno's emphasis on the details of each and every characters, female and male both, made sure the role is meant for that particular actor only. He elaborated the characterisation in such a way that audience and critics still not felt tired to discuss the role played by the actors. No one thought before Unishe April that the relationship between a widow mother played by Aparna Sen and doctor daughter played by Debashree Roy, can be a subject of a film and that too it will become a master piece.

Rituparno deary said that he is inspired by veteran master Satyajit Ray. Like Ray, he was also well versed in the art of cinema, both of them are known for every little details of their respective films. Ray was a versatile multi-talented persona so as Rituparno. Beside the direction of a film he used to take care the details of the screenplay, set, costumes, lyrics and music of his film. And finally he turned to be an actor also.

Many people considered that the best film made by Rituparno is his third film Dahan (Crossfire), based on a real-life story which adopted by noted Bengali writer Suchitra Bhattacharya in her novel. For Dahan, both the leading female characters played by Rituparno Sengupta and Indrani Haldar received the National Award of Best Actress and Rituparno got the National Award for Best Screenplay. In Dahan, he insisted veteran Rabindra Sangeet singer Suchitra Mitra to act in an important female character. Rituparno discovered the veteran singer's another side of talent, before him thought so. Through Dahan he made himself as one of the most talented upcoming filmmaker of Indian Cinema, who was going to rule for long.

For his forth film Bariwali (Lady of the House) produced by Anupam Kher, where Kirron Kher bagged the National Award of Best Actress and Sudipta Chakraborty got the National Award for Best supporting Actress. Since then it was a dream for all the actress to work with Rituparno whatever role it is, because the characters are so strong and well defined that there is a huge chance to get the prestigious National Award and if not at least the huge attention by the critic and audience. Bariwali also got the prestigious NETPAC Award at the Berlin International Film Festival.

By the time Rituparno got the recognition throughout India and obviously from the Hindi Film Industry based in Mumbai, big production houses were eager to come and support his film without any interference in content, which is a bit rare in the film industry, to support any young filmmaker fully without much diluting the content. They knew Rituparno was a strict filmmaker, he was not going to compromise with the content at all. Because of his strong content and bold statement and his ability to give a modest return to his producer, and a huge possibility to get an award, all this factor worked for him. So producers not only from Mumbai but also all over India were ready to produce his film.

His another films Asukh (Unwell) produced by D. Ramanaidu got the National Award for Best Feature in Bengali Film, Utsab (The Festival) got National Award for Best Direction, Shubho Muhurat (Auspicious Moment) again got the National Award for Best Feature in Bengali and actress Rakhee Gulzar won the National Award for the Best Supporting Actress. After Yash Chopra in his film Daag, only Rituparno dare to invite to act the legendary actresses Sharmila Tagore and Rakhee Gulzar to act together in his film Shubho Muhurat. While Nandita Das acted as the protagonist in the film.

Rituparno was quite a master to use the combination of actors in his various film. In Tili where Konkona Sen Sharma acted as the protagonist, her real mother Aparna Sen acted in the film as her mother. And first time we see Mithun Chakraborty opposite Aparna Sen. Tili got the FIPRESCI Award in the Bombay International Film Festival.

When Aishwarya Rai used to be the leading actress in the Hindi film industry, at that time Rituparno invited her to act in a Bengali film based on Tagore's novel Chookher Bali, which was a great commercial success while Raima Sen established herself as serious actress in the Indian Film Industry. Before the film, Raima, the daughter of actress Moon Moon Sen and grand-daughter of legendary actress Suchitra Sen was not able to make her prominent mark as an actress. After Chookher Bali filmmakers and critic started taking Raima seriously. So in a way Rituparno was very much capable to take out and present the best acting ability from his actors.

In 2004, he made his first Hindi film Raincoat again with Aishwarya Rai and in her opposite Ajay Devgan. Like the tradition, Raincoat also got the National Award for the Best Hindi Film.

He was involved in a controversy for the film Antarmahal, based on veteran Bengali writer Tarasankar Bandyopadhyay, for not giving the credit to the writer, finally it was sorted out. Antarmahal described the Bengali society

ROLE OF LAW OFFICERS (ATTORNEY-GENERAL AND SOLICITOR GENERAL)

— Bipin Aspatwar

Historically, the Attorney-General of India works at the intersection of the courts and the political executive. But his role (and other law officers) has been subject matter of intense scrutiny in light of the recent 'Coalgate' proceedings in the Supreme Court. Is he answerable to the courts or to the political executive?

The Attorney-General is a constitutional functionary, appointed by the President under Article 76 of the Indian Constitution. Though, the Attorney-General (and the law officers) are not political appointees, the law officers by convention are replaced on change of a government. The Attorney-General is the government's chief legal adviser, and a primary lawyer for litigation purposes. He can represent the government in any court in India and can participate in Parliament, although with no voting rights.

A "Law officer" is defined in Rule 2(c) of the Law Officer (Condition of Service) Rules, 1987 as: "Law Officer" means and includes the Attorney-General for India, the Solicitor-General for India, Additional Solicitor General for India." The Law Officer (Condition of Service) Rules, 1987 deal with the remuneration, duties and other terms and conditions of the

The Attorney-General for India.

The office of the Attorney-General is one of the offices placed on special footing by the Constitution. He is the first Law Officer of the Government of India, and as such, his duty shall be—

(i) to give advice on such legal matters and to perform such other duties of a legal character as may, from time to time, be referred or assigned to him by the President; and (ii) to discharge the functions conferred on him by the Constitution or any other law for the time being in force [Art. 76].

Though the Attorney-General of India is not (as in England) a member of the Cabinet, he shall also have the right to speak in the Houses of Parliament or in any Committee thereof, but shall have no right to vote [Art. 89]. By virtue of his office, he is entitled to the privileges of a member of Parliament [Art. 105(4)]. In the performance of his official duties, the Attorney-General shall have a right of audience in all Courts in the territory of India.

The Attorney-General for India shall be appointed by the President and shall hold office during the pleasure of the President. He must have the same qualifications as are required to be a Judge of the Supreme Court. He shall receive such remuneration as the President may determine. He is not a whole-time counsel for the Government nor a Government servant.

Rule 5(c) of these rules elaborates the duties of a law officer as (a) to give advice to the Government of India on legal matters, and perform such other duties of a legal character, as may be referred or assigned to him by the Government of India; (b) to appear in the Supreme Court or in any High Court on behalf of the Government of India in cases (including suits, writ petitions, appeal and other proceedings) in which the Government of India is concerned as a party or is otherwise interested; (c) to represent the Government of India in any reference made by the President to the Supreme Court under Article 143 of the Constitution; (d) to discharge such other functions as are conferred on a Law Officer by or under the Constitution or any other Law for the time being in force. Historically, the Attorney-General has played an important role in assisting the Courts in interpreting law, in addressing the Parliament on complicated issues of law and upholding the administration of justice. It is a prestigious position in the legal fraternity has been held by leading lawyers of the country. The first Attorney-General of India was M.C. Setalvad who

Today, healthcare and engineering are working hand-in-hand in several ways. The outcomes of this alliance are sophisticated diagnostic equipment, medical instruments and treatment procedures. With the advent of every such groundbreaking innovation the healthcare industry is moving towards ideal procedures. One such innovation is robotic surgery, which uses robots to perform critical surgeries.

Robotic surgery deals with performing a surgery using robotic devices. With the advent of these devices, traditional invasive surgeries with large incisions are being replaced by minimally invasive surgeries. These procedures are performed using miniaturised surgical instruments through tiny ports or keyholes in the human body. Among such surgical instruments, surgical robots are noteworthy.

'Da Vinci', is the most popular robot used for performing surgeries. It was developed by Intuitive Surgical, USA. It is believed to be the most advanced tele-surgical system in the world. The instrument has four arms. One of the arms is equipped with a high-definition camera, which transmits true three-dimensional magnification images to the surgeon's console. The other three arms are mounted with tiny proprietary instruments.

The arms of the robot are equipped with sensors that pick up the surgeon's hand movements and replicate them at the actual surgical site. The system is also featured with advanced options to scale down the movements and filter tremors. It is like the surgeon's hand being inside the patient while the reality is that he is operating in virtual reality by observing the detailed images on the screen. Robotic surgery can increase the success rates of complicated surgical procedures. They minimise invasion and incision, which enhance patient experience as well. With robotic devices, surgeons have better control over medical instruments. They provide access to hard-to-reach places without causing damage to area surrounding the target spot. This reduces tissue trauma less than what can ever be achieved by human hands. Small incisions mean less blood loss, less pain, faster healing and shorter stay at hospital. The devices come with maximum range of motion and accuracy due to which surgeries are safer and precise.

Myths:
Some people panic by the idea of robots performing the operations. However, the fact is, the actual surgery is performed by the surgeon. He controls the movements of the robot using a remote manipulator or computer control.

The skill of using the robot:
Robotic surgery is not a separate speciality in medical sciences. It is an advanced technique, which surgeons can apply to deliver better results in their work. It can be employed in a wide range of specialities like cardiac, gastrointestinal, thoracic, neurology, urology, gynaecology, prostate cancer and general surgeries.

With medical science fast integrating with technology, and the world embracing the latest techniques promptly, surgeons too should focus on enhancing their skills to stay ahead in their career. After all, computer-enhanced, fine-tuned surgical skills will definitely give you an edge over others.

Skills:
Learning to perform surgeries using robotic devices calls for intensive learning. As it is with any other activity, practice makes surgeons perfect at using the device. Before performing the actual surgery with the robot, doctors are trained to use the device in virtual world, using simulators. During the training, they need to understand the working of robotic systems. They need to interpret the images and feedback communicated by the device and provide inputs for its course of action. Initially, you may take twice as long as traditional surgery to complete a robotic surgery. Gaining mastery over robotic surgery often demands 10-15 actual experiences. Before being trained in robotic surgery, doctors should gain mastery in traditional operating procedures. Therefore, it goes without saying that Masters in Surgery is the minimum eligibility criteria to opt for this training.

A decent idea about how computational devices work, enthusiasm to learn about the latest devices in medical equipment market, keen interest on updating knowledge about developments in the medical world, intense desire to be at the forefront of change are the attitudes that will keep the aspirants going.

In India, robotic surgery is in its nascent stage. There are only a few medical robots and fewer surgeons, who can perform surgeries using them. The primary reason behind this is lack of mentorship in the specialised area. Aspiring surgeons often get themselves trained in USA or UK. Fortunately, these days, some of the top hospitals and medical institutions are inviting robotics surgery experts from different countries to train Indian surgeons.

On the other hand, patients opting for robotic surgery are not many owing to the fact that it is a costly option compared to traditional surgery. Lack of awareness about the benefits of robotic surgery and doubts about its efficiency are some reasons why patients hesitate to opt for it.

However, with the awareness about the technique increasing, and more importantly, medical tourism picking up in India, more and more hospitals are moving towards adopting it. AIIMS, New Delhi, Rajiv Gandhi Cancer Institute, New Delhi, Vattikuti Institute of Robotic Surgery, (Hyderabad, Bangalore, Mumbai, and Gurgaon) and Fortis Hospital, New Delhi are among the pioneers to perform robotic surgeries in India.

Career prospects of robotic surgeons are challenging and exciting. Salary package of robotic surgeons is very high. Robotic surgery is poised to become a standard of care in several surgical procedures. Surgeons performing traditional surgeries can get trained in this technique. It will surely make a huge difference to their career!

was also the first head of the Law Commission of India (1955-1958). This position has been held by prominent advocates, such as C.K. Daphtary, Niren De, S.V. Gupte, Soli Sorabjee, Ashok Desai among others.

History

The history of the office of Attorney-General can be traced back to 13th Century England. As the Sovereign could not appear in person in courts, it was necessary for his attorney to represent and plead the Sovereign's case. In 1461, the King's Attorney came to be described as the Attorney General, when he was called upon to go the House of Lords to advise upon legal matters. Over the years (centuries), the Attorney-General became not only an instrument by which the sovereign discharged his legal functions and responsibilities, but also the chief prosecutor, member of Parliament, and a minister of state with important political responsibilities. These myriad roles tended to overlap and influence each other, leading to controversies.

The difficulty of reconciling these roles, led to the notion of 'independent aloofness' in England. Independent Aloofness being the notion that a) the Attorney-General should not be involved in questions of government policy nor too closely in policy debates within government; b) should not engage in robust political debate except in relation to his own portfolio; and c) should be generally reticent and non-confrontational with respect to party politics. This doctrine of independent aloofness has influenced countries whose legal systems have been derived from Britain. In the former British colonies of India, Kenya, Singapore, Sri Lanka, Malta among others, the Attorney-General has been envisaged as a public official independent of politics.

The role of Attorney-General in England has not been static and has seen many changes over the years. In the recent past, the office of the Attorney-General in England courted controversy relating to its advice on the legality of invading Iraq, potential prosecutions in the "cash for honours" case, and a decision to halt investigations by the Serious Fraud Office into the bribing by a British arms firm to secure contracts. In response, in 2007, the House of Commons Constitutional Affairs Committee report recommended split-minister in the Ministry of Justice.

Though law officers share a client-attorney relationship with the government, their first and foremost allegiance is owed to the Constitution of India and the rule of law. The Supreme Court of India has described an Attorney-General as having a lawyer-client relationship with the government, and at the same time being a friend of the court.

In B.P. Singhal vs. Union of India (2010) 6 SCC 331, the Supreme Court held that though the Attorney-General holds a public office, there is an element of lawyer-client relationship between the union government and the Attorney-General. In P.N. Dua vs. Shivshankar (1988) 3 SCC 167 the Supreme Court observed that the Attorney-General and the Solicitor General in respect of the (Supreme) Court occupy positions of great importance and relevance. The Court observed that unlike England, the Attorney-General is not a member of the Cabinet, yet is a friend of the Court, and in some respects acts as a friend, philosopher and guide to the Court. The Court described itself as the finder and interpreter of law with the assistance of Attorney-General and in his absence the Solicitor General. There have even been instances where law officers have been appointed amicus curiae (i.e. the friend of the Court), to assist the Court in specific matters (for example contempt of Court, issue relating to MP Local Development

Solicitor General of India

The Solicitor General of India is subordinate to the Attorney General for India, who is the Indian government's chief legal advisor, and its primary lawyer in the Supreme Court of India. The Solicitor General of India is appointed for the period of 3 years. The Solicitor General of India is the secondary law officer of the country, assists the Attorney General, and is himself assisted by several Additional Solicitors General of India. Like the Attorney General for India, the Solicitor General and the Additional Solicitors General advise the Government and appear on behalf of the Union of India in terms of the Law Officers (Terms and Conditions) Rules, 1972. However, unlike the post of Attorney General for India, which is a Constitutional post under Article 76 of the Constitution of India, the posts of the Solicitor General and the Additional Solicitors General are merely statutory.

Area scheme).

In India, the role of Attorney-General was not envisaged to be political. The Attorney-General and the other law officers are not members of the government, or hold positions as ministers. Is the position of the Attorney-General political? Or is it of a lawyer who is neutral and merely represents the government and gives unbiased advice?

In the final analysis, the true master of the Attorney-General is unclear. In theory, he is a friend of the court and must uphold the constitution. But in practice, his client, paymaster, and appointer is the government of India. In any constitutional democracy, occasional conflict between the judiciary and executive is inevitable. It is therefore unavoidable that the Attorney-General's role in such conflicts will be scrutinized. The only question is whether he is able to handle these conflicts with intelligence and integrity.

DEPUTATION TO THE CANTEEN

STORES DEPARTMENT, MINISTRY OF DEFENCE

Looking for young professionals who will support S&T leaders fly high

CSIR invites young and dynamic technical professionals to create new paradigm in the management of R&D as a part of its:

- Human Resource Development Group (HRDG)
- Information Technology Division (ITD)
- Unit for Science Dissemination (USD)
- Innovation Protection Unit (IPU)
- International S&T Affairs Directorate (ISTAD)
- Open Source Drug Discovery (OSDD) Unit
- Planning and Performance Division (PPD)
- Traditional Knowledge Digital Library (TKDL)
- Operations Management and Project Finance & Accounting (OMPFA)

Council of Scientific & Industrial Research (CSIR), established in 1942, is an autonomous Society with the Prime Minister of India as its President. An ensemble of 37 state-of-the-art National Laboratories/Institutes, 6 Units and 38 Centres, CSIR today is amongst the foremost and largest publicly funded scientific and industrial research organisations in the world. CSIR delivers cutting-edge science on one hand and state-of-the-art technology on the other. The expertise and experience of CSIR is embodied in its more than 4600 scientists and 8000 technical support personnel apart from about 8000 JRF/SRF/RA and project staff. Over the years, CSIR has played a pivotal role in the advancement of S&T, covering diverse domains. CSIR has spawned many organisations, many disciplines and most importantly has served as a nursery and training ground for most of India's distinguished scientists and technologists. CSIR has ushered India into the knowledge economy, creating and nurturing talent in science, innovation and technology.

CSIR has endeavored to be at the forefront of R&D in diverse areas. In doing so, it has made concerted efforts to put in place innovative strategies and mechanisms for management of R&D.

Located in New Delhi, CSIR, comprises diverse S&T, administrative and finance divisions which help in functioning of its constituent laboratories, units and centres as per the mission in place.

CSIR now offers positions for enthusiastic technical professionals with an ability to take up responsibility to help senior CSIR professionals at its headquarters to manage and execute R&D, as part of the following positions:

in the British era, the feudal Zamindari culture. Jackie Shroff, Roopa Ganguly and Soha Ali Khan acted in the leading roles. Antarmahal was nominated for the prestigious Golden Leopard award at the Locarno International Film Festival. Even Mithun Chakraborty accused Rituparno of putting more and more importance on the female characters, but finally veteran Bengali actor Prosenjit Chatterjee got the Jury Special Mention National Award for his role in Dosar (Companion) directed by Rituparno. His next, first English film The Last Lear completely put more importance on the character of Amitabh Bachchan, while Preeti Zinta, Divya Dutta and Arjun Rampal played important roles in the film. And

The Last Lear got the Best English Film in the National Award category.

The leading actress of the Hindi films, like Manisha Koirala acted in his film Khela (The Sport) and while Bipasha Basu acted in Sob Choritro Kalponik (All Characters are Imaginary). Sob Choritro Kalponik got the National Award for Best Feature in Bengali Film and also screened at the Durban International Film Festival. Rituparno was a master to portray the human relationship. In Abohoman (The Eternal), he portrays the man woman relationship through a filmmaker, his wife and his relationship with an actress, while his strong bonding with his own son. Abohoman was awarded the National Award for Best Feature in Bengali Film, while Rituparno Ghosh also got the National Award for Best Direction and actress Ananya Chatterjee got the National Award for Best Actress.

Noukadubi (Boat wreck) based on Rabindranath Tagore's novel, where his brother Indranil Ghosh got the National Award for the Art Direction.

Rituparno started his acting career with the Odia film Katha Deithilli Ma Ku, then Just Another Love Story and Memories in March. Through these last mentioned films he came out as a very strong, bold gay right activist. He was never ever bothered about his sexuality preference and always discussed the sensitive issue with a great care.

His latest film, again based on Tagore's dance drama, Chitrangada, which he not only directed but also acted as a protagonist. For his bold presence, he got the Special Jury Award this year.

He has completed a double version (Hindi-Bengali) film Sunglass, which is yet to be released. While his documentary on Tagore on the Tagore's Sequential Birth anniversary celebration Jiban Smriti is also unreleased yet. Satyanweshi which he completed shooting as the director of his last film but the post production needs to done.

While Rituparno has gone so early but he left behind a huge legacy and knowledge which will inspire the young generation to go for hard work, lot of research and reading to create authentic content, only that can make any life immortal.
