UTTARAKHAND TRAGEDY : A MAN MADE DISASTER

- Himanshu Thakkar

Natural disasters involving Himalayan mountains, rivers, forests, glaciers and people over 38,000 sq km area are bound to be complex. Many a times, a natural disaster and its impacts are a result of multiple things occurring together. Current Uttarakhand disaster highlight the anthropogenic reasons which has contributed towards increasing its impact many fold. Uttarakhand is a fragile, new mountain state. Uttarakhand is inherently vulnerable to various kinds of disasters like high intensity rainfall, cloud bursts, land slides, flash floods and earthquakes. Its geology is ridden with numerous fault lines. Climate change is increasing the frequency of high intensity rainfall including cloud bursts and flash floods, Glacial Lake Outburst floods (as it seems to have happened in current disaster at more than one place including upstream of Kedarnath, upstream of Hemkunt Sahib and Pithoragarh) and with them the landslides. In such a situation all our developmental project need to take this reality into account and strive to reduce the risks.

While the rainfall is natural, the root causes which increased the human tragedy include unregulated, unsafe and unplanned infrastructure development along the rivers and development of large number of hydel projects in the fragile zone without proper checks and balances, lack of transparent studies and democratic decision-making processes. Flouting of rules is rampant in Uttarakhand, but the tragedy has shown that nature does not take bribes.

The first principle of disaster management is prior warning, we failed there. The first thing that strikes you when you analyse this disaster is that we did not have the Doppler Radar system in place that could have helped predict even an event of cloud burst at least 3-6 hours in advance of the event. The system and money for it was sanctioned for Uttarakhand since 2008 but due to lack of coordination between Uttarakhand government, India Meteorological Department (IMD) and National Disaster Management Authority (NDMA), the system was not available.

The Uttarakhand Meteorological department made a warning of heavy to very heavy rainfall on June 15, 16 and 17 and even warned the pilgrims to postpone the trip to the char dham (Gangotri, Yamunotri, Kedarnath and Badrinath) for four days. However, the response of the Uttarakhand administration to this warning has been generally callous. The chief minister has been saying there was no actionable forecast. Even though some in administration claim they took action, there is no evidence of any effective action.

Even after the rainfall started, there was no immediate monitoring of the heavy rainfall at specific locations and prompt dissemination the information about the same to the downstream administration and people. In fact it seems that Kedarnath, epicenter of the disaster, has no rain gauge.

Central Water Commission is India's premier technical body in charge of flood forecasting. However, CWC completely failed to forecast the floods in the entire flood ravaged Uttarakhand area. At Srinagar, even as hundreds of houses faced flooding during early hours of June 17, CWC had no flood forecast, even though it has a flood warning site at Srinagar.

As the CAG report of March 2013 shows, the State Disaster Management Authority (SDMA) of Uttarakhand was constituted under the chairmanship of state Chief Minister in 2007, but has never met, the state has formulating no rules, regulations, policies or guidelines for disaster management. A functional SDMA in Uttarakhand does not exist. This indicates that agencies like IMD, CWC, NDMA and SDMA have failed to put in place basic systems of warning, forecasting, monitoring and information dissemination that can greatly reduce disaster potential of any area.

Since the Uttarakhand state was formed in 2000, the state is on a path of massive growth of various projects including mining, roads, large number of hydropower projects, buildings, tourism, etc. But the reality of the vulnerabilities was completely ignored. Illegal river bed mining was so unsustainable, destructive and rampant that Swami Nigmanand gave up his life fasting to stop it. There are clear directives from courts that there can be no construction in at least 100 meters on both sides of the rivers, but there is nobody implementing this in Uttarakhand, hundreds of buildings are coming up on the riverbed itself, besides encroachment of the 100 m corridors at many places. Even government buildings have been coming up in this zone, the massive building of the paramilitary Sashastra Seema Bal at Srinagar (inaugurated only last year) and various hotels of the government tourism corporations are evidence of this. During the Aug 3-4, 2012 Uttarkashi disaster also buildings were collapsing along the Bhagirathi River as if made of cardboard boxes, as shown on TV channels this June. The report of the state disaster mitigation and management centre after that and the Sept 2012 Ukhimath disaster in Rudraprayag district made a series of recommendations, but no one bothered to implement any of them. Roads are being constructed and expanded in Uttarakhand over the last decade, giving a miss to all kind of safety regulations, including geological fault lines, risks of land slides, use of blasting, deforestation, complete lack of attention to risks of landslides and lack of cross drainage structures. Huge expansion of tourism over the last decade has not kept in mind basic norms of disaster management.

Over two hundred hydropower projects of various sizes are in various levels of implementation, some operating, some under construction, others in clearance and planning stage. All of them have significant environmental and social impact as also impact on disaster potential of the area. For projects below 25 MW there is no impact assessment or monitoring. Even for projects above 25 MW, our former environment minister Jairam Ramesh is on record having said that most EIAs are dishonest, cut-and-past jobs. The Expert Appraisal Committee of Union Ministry of Environment and Forests does not apply its mind to the basic norms of adequacy of EIAs, lack of cumulative impact assessment, adequacy of public consultation process or environment compliance. Even when evidence of violations is presented before the governments, they have failed to take any credible remedial steps. These projects involve large dam, tunnels, roads, townships, deforestation, submergence and so on. They hugely increased the disaster potential of the state. Just to illustrate, the under construction 330 MW Sringeri hydropower project on Alaknanda river had dumped over half a million cubic meters of muck illegally on the Alaknanda riverbed. On the night of June 17, the river took all the muck with the floods to the Srinagar town, submerging hundreds of houses under water and some under one to three stories of silt. The illegal dumping of the muck in the river has been repeatedly brought to the attention of the state and the central government, but no effective action was taken. The same phenomena was also repeated downstream of Phata Byung and Singoli Bhatwari hydropower projects on Mandakini River in Rudraprayag district.

The state government and central government agencies like CWC and THDC have been trying to deflect the criticism that the hydropower projects are facing, by making some baseless claims about how the Tehri dam saved downstream Haridwar and Rishikesh. Our analysis shows that even if Tehri dam were not there, there would have been no increase in the flood levels at these towns since the Bhagirathi and Alaknanda floods came at different points of time.

We need to realize that we have made some serious mistakes of omissions and commissions. As Uttarakhand now turns towards rebuilding and rehabilitation, it needs to accept these mistakes and make urgent amends. Initiate cumulative impact assessment and carrying capacity studies in all river basins, and put a stop to under construction and planned projects in the meantime. Ensure an active disaster management department that has key role in all development decision making. Put in place credible environmental governance and compliance system. Assess the vulnerability of the various infrastructure and people in the changing climate. Put in place robust warning, forecasting, monitoring and information dissemination system. If we do not take such minimum steps, next disaster may make the current one look like a trailer.

SKILLED MANPOWER FOR THE HOSPITALITY INDUSTRY

- A. Rajesh

The hospitality industry consists of broad category of sub verticals within the service industry that includes lodging, restaurants, event management, theme parks, transportation, cruise line and additional fields in the tourism industry.

The tourism & hospitality industry in India's contribution was USD 32.7 Billion in 2011. The industry is greatly dependent on the disposal incomes of the population in India and tourists visiting India. This makes the industry highly susceptible to macro-economic changes like recession.

After witnessing exceptionally bad years in 2009-2010 due to global economic slowdown, the Indian hotel industry appears to be on a path of slow recovery as of now. With tourism industry showing excellent performance in terms of foreign tourist arrival the demand outpacing supply the hospitality industry is poised to grow at a faster rate. The number of foreign tourist was 6.2 million in 2011 and is expected to rise to 11.1 million by 2021.

The industry is bound to grow at a very rapid pace, driven by a lot of the above initiatives and rapid urbanization, increasing disposable incomes and a very young population. The growth in the industry is expected to fuel a resultant growth in the number of jobs created in the vertical. Job opportunities in the retail industry are expected to be across all levels from semi-skilled resources to post graduates. The hospitality industry covers a wide range of organizations offering food service and accommodation. The hospitality industry has a number of sub-verticals and segments. These include Lodging, Food & Beverages, Events & Meetings, Gaming, Entertainment, Tourism Services etc. With the hospitality industry in the midst of a boom there is a severe need for skilled manpower across all these key sub-verticals.

Most hospitality industry organizations have multiple functions. F&B restaurant or even an amusement park will all have functions such as facility management and maintenance, direct operations (Customer Services, House Keeping, Kitchen, etc.), Management, Marketing, Finance and Human Resources.

Quality of manpower is important in the hospitality industry. The industry provides employment to skilled, semi-skilled, and unskilled labour directly and indirectly. In India, the average employee-to-room ratio at 1.6 (2008-09), is much higher than that for hotels across the world. The ratio stands at 1.7 for five-star hotels and at 1.9 and 1.6 for the four-star and three-star categories respectively. Hotel owners in India tend to have access manpower in many cases to with a hope to drive improved customer satisfaction.

Most of the requirement for skilled manpower is in the areas of direct operations. There is a huge demand for kitchen hand, waiter, cafe and restaurant manager, chef, cook, bar attender, house keeper, car driver, tourism and travel advisor, hotel management, travel information officer/ consultant, hospitality manager, massage therapist, bakers, pastry cooks beauty therapist, food and beverage attendant, gaming workers, electricians, plumbers, butchers, cashier/ accountants etc. In addition to these roles the industry is always looking for people to furnish other client services roles.

Most of the above roles require skilled candidates. For those looking to take up job opportunities in Hospitality sector, it is advisable that they consider the skill demands for each role and then decide the best fit role for them. For example those taking up jobs as drivers at Hotels will have to cognizant of the fact that they would need to have skills to drive luxury cars and might have to work odd hours to receive hotel guests. Kitchen jobs require great degree of skill in cooking and baking but also the ability to work in a high stress environment.

Once one is clear of the kind of job role one would like to aspire for, then it is relatively easy to get a foot hold in the industry. There are number of organizations that offer certified training programs for people aspiring to make a career in this industry. Candidates can choose to undergo the relevant program of their interest before applying for jobs in organizations. It is preferred that a candidate undergoes training provided from a reputed institute who has relevant industry partnerships. The industry partnership will help ensure that the curriculum of the course is aligned to industry needs and the skills imparted are relevant to the aspired job role.

The industry has been encouraged by the Indian Government. Various policy measures undertaken by the Ministry of Tourism and tax incentives have also aided growth of the hospitality industry, some of them include Allowance of 100% FDI in the hotel industry (including construction of hotels, resorts, and recreational facilities) through the automatic route, Issuance of visa-on-arrival for tourists from select countries, which include Japan, New Zealand, and Finland & Exemption of Fringe Benefit Tax on crèches, employee sports, and guest house facilities

Building capacity of skilled manpower for the hospitality industry is a key focus area for the the Ministry of Tourism. They recently conducted a training programme for youths from the weaker sections of society at the Indian Railway Customer Care Institute in New Delhi. The programme named "Hunar Se Rozgar", offers young people in the age group of 18-28 years with education up to the level of minimum 8th standard to be given training and also a stipend. There are similar programs being offered by other organizations that imparts short term training in housekeeping, bakery and multi-skilled course in food production and food and beverage industry.

Unfortunately one of the big challenges facing the Hospitality industry is that like other service sector, hospitality careers are often stereo-typed as low wage with little opportunity for career advancement. Consequently qualified youth are unaware of the range of career options available. It is important that job aspirants look beyond the stereo types and understand the breadth of opportunities the industry has to offer prospective candidates.

One very essential skill to succeed in this industry is a high degree of proficiency in English. English is like de-facto windows in our computers. It's the passport to career growth. This is one of the key reasons for the unfulfilled demand for skilled labours in the industry. Though India has a huge population, the diversified labour force available in India does not necessarily speak in English. Even those who do speak the language aren't very proficient with the same.

Another pre-requisite skill for this industry is basic soft skills. Soft skills include behaviour, attitude, body language, people to people communication skills etc. These skills are extremely critical for the industry because the industry is a service industry with a great degree of dependency on customer satisfaction. Soft skills aren't easy to acquire and is severely lacking with most skilled labour in India today. Candidates need to put in the required effort to build their soft skills to succeed in the Hospitality industry.

People aspiring for a career in hospitality industry need to be open to the idea of relocating for career growth. Most opportunities would be either in urban areas or in tourist destinations. This would require the workforce to have a degree of mobility and willingness to relocate as new opportunities present themselves for growth.

The key people challenge facing the industry today is it high attrition levels. However this is also likely to drive a growth in demand for workforce.

The hospitality industry is definitely a lucrative career option with the industry paying relatively well for skilled resources across roles. The industry is known to value the skills of its employees and the compensation reflects the skill set of the employee and their on job performance. With the Indian economy growing at 8% the last few years, the hospitality industry has benefited because of increased spending on business travel by corporates. Also, the increasing rate of income has seen a spurt in demand for domestic leisure travel in the country. India is also proving to be a favoured tourist destination for leisure, as well as business travel from across the globe. This is reflected in the spurt in the number of foreign tourists in the country in the last couple of years. India is fast becoming one of the most preferred tourist destinations in the world because of the unique experience it has to offer its visitors.

For those looking to make their careers in hospitality, there is a unique opportunity to ride a wave of industry growth to achieve career aspirations. The opportunities in hospitality industry lie across various skill sets and various levels. The critical success factor for anyone looking to make a career in this industry is the same as that with any other industry- Passion & Perseverance. Those with a passion for hospitality and the perseverance to strive hard are bound to succeed in this industry.
