State of the Economy

FOOD SECURITY

-- Nilachala Acharya

With this issue we begin a new column 'State of the Economy' that will be published on every second and third issue. The column will cover important economic topics that will be very beneficial for candidates appearing for various competitive exams.

Given the persistence of poverty, hunger and malnutrition in the country, it is commendable that the Union Cabinet approved promulgation of an ordinance to implement the National Food Security Bill and it has been signed by the President of India. The country's performance in reducing the number of people afflicted by malnutrition and hunger has been dismal both at the household and individual levels; the National Food Security Ordinance 2013 is meant to address some of these serious concerns. This important measure by the Union Government can prove to be a substantive step towards making the country hunger free by enabling its citizens to access foodgrains at nominal prices. The history of the Food Security Legislation in India dates back to 1942 when the Public Distribution System (PDS) was evolved, owing to shortage of foodgrains during World War II. The then government had started distributing foodgrains through the PDS and the intervention had been continued in major cities and certain food deficient regions. However, the policy on PDS has witnessed major changes, with a universal approach at times and a targeted approach in certain phases, after Independence. The Seventh Five Year Plan assigned the PDS a crucial role by bringing the entire population into its ambit, and, over the years, it evolved as an important government intervention towards ensuring availability of foodgrains to the public at affordable prices as well as for tackling poverty. However, a Targeted PDS (TPDS) for foodgrains has been in place since 1997. Under the TPDS, the quantum of provisioning of foodgrains varies across Below Poverty Line (BPL) and Above Poverty Line (APL) households with different prices. The National Food Security Ordinance guarantees provisioning of subsidised foodgrains to almost two-third of the country's population, which would include 50 percent of the urban population and 75 percent of people living in rural areas. It requires the government to provide 5kg of foodgrains(cereals) per person per month - at prices of Rs. 3 per kg of rice, Rs.2 per kg of wheat, and Rs.1 per kg of millets - for a period of three years from the date of commencement of the ordinance. Further, the ordinance includes provisions, like, pregnant women and lactating mothers being entitled to free of cost meals through the local Anganwadi centres during pregnancy and for six months after child birth, and maternity benefits of not less than six thousand rupees. Also, every child within the age group of six months to six years shall receive appropriate meal free of cost, and, those in the age group of six to fourteen years will be provided Mid-day meals in all government schools on all days except on school holidays. Apart from these provisions, measures pertaining to women's empowerment, grievance redressal mechanisms, reforms in the PDS, food security allowances etc. are some of the other positive features in the said ordinance. With regard to the Food Security legislation, some observers have been raising concerns about the cost implications for the government. The amount provided in the Union Budget every year as Food Subsidy is paid to the Food Corporation of India (FCI), which is based on the difference between the Economic Costs (EC) borne by the FCI for procuring foodgrains and the Central Issue Price (CIP) for foodgrains collected through the PDS. Earlier this year, the Union Budget 2013-14 had projected that the Food Subsidy to be provided by the Union Government this year would be to the tune of Rs. 90,000 crore. However, in order to implement the Food Security legislation, the financial resources required are now estimated to go up to the level of Rs. 1,25,000 crore (which would be about 1.25 percent of the country's GDP) this year; in addition to which, the existing budgetary provisions for the Mid-Day Meal Scheme and the Integrated Child Development Services Scheme would also be utilized towards fulfilling some of the provisions of the legislation. However, several observers and policy analysts have pointed out that the Food Security legislation should have been much more inclusive in terms of its coverage of population. For instance, had this legislation attempted to cover 80 percent of the total households in the country (i.e. with the exclusion of only the top 20 percent of the households) with a provision of 35 kg of foodgrains per household per month (i.e. 30 kg of rice/wheat and 5 kg of millets per household per month at prices of Rs. 3 per kg of rice / Rs. 2 per kg of wheat /Rs. 1 per kg of millets),at the existing levels of Economic Costs for procuring foodgrains, the Food Subsidy bill would have been Rs. 1,65,828 crore a year. Given the persistence of the problems of hunger and malnutrition in the country and the scope available for the Union Government to step up its tax revenue mobilization, there was indeed a strong case for the government to expand the coverage of the Food Security legislation. In fact, the Global Hunger Index Report, 2012 has pointed out that "India has lagged behind in improving its GHI score despite strong economic growth"; for rural India, it has been reported that around 50 percent children are undernourished and more than half of pregnant women suffer from anaemia. Further, the ordinance is focusing only on distribution of cereals, which would address the problem of hunger but might not be very effective in reducing malnutrition. Provisioning of rice, wheat and millets through the PDS would offer calories to fight hunger, but a healthy diet requires cereals with pulses and higher amounts of vitamins and minerals. Similarly, the gaps in infrastructure (relating to storage of foodgrains and transportation etc.) need to be addressed to make the PDS a robust system. Also, a lot more effort would be required both from the Union Government and the State Governments for proper implementation of schemes like the MDM and ICDS. Nonetheless, the National Food Security Ordinance does seem to have a lot of potential for addressing the serious challenges of hunger and malnutrition in the country, and it could produce the desired results with proactive measures by the Union and State Governments for strengthening the PDS across the country.

Hundred Years of Ghadr Movement : History and Ideology

- Harjinder Kaur and Balbir Madhopuri

Ghadr Party's Ideology

The ideology of the Ghadr Movement could be well understood from an advertisement published in the Ghadr paper. For example, it is written on the front page of the 1st September,1914 issue of the Ghadr:

Wanted : Fearless and brave soldiers to create mutiny in India

Award : Martyrdom

Pension : Independence

Area of Operation : India

The ideology of the Ghadr Party was revolutionary. It was to set up a government having democratic and socialist system through armed struggle. The ambit of the war of independence being fought from a foreign land, the United States of America (about 10,000 Miles away) was the entire India and other countries under imperialistic rule.

The Ghadr Movement adopted secularism as its motto. It gave priority to project views against social inequality, economic discrimination and mutual hatred among various religions and caste war and untouchability. The leaders kept before them the ideal to create a society devoid of exploitation which is classless, colour less and caste less. In short, it was to build revolutionary socialism and Indian nationalism.

The Ghadr Movement in its mouthpiece Hindustan Ghadr and other publications criticized all those contemporary parties and organizations which were limited to demanding only more rights or were happy at getting government jobs.

The Ghadr Party sent two armed missions for the complete independence of India but these failed. Another attempt was made a third time. The mission included five revolutionaries.

They were Mangu Ram (Mugowal), Hari Singh Usman, Harnam Das, Gambhir Singh and Harnam Chand.

Actually, Schooner Annie Larsen was not suitable for a trans-Pacific voyage.An other ship the SS Maverick was arranged, to be parched under the illusion that it was used by the American-Asiatic Oil Company. According to plan, Annie Larsen transferred its shipment to Maverick which would proceed towards South-Asia. However, the plan failed as it was challenged by an American from Allied warships. After failing to meet Annie Larsen, the Maverick was directed to Hilo, Hawaii.The four Ghadrites attempted to flee in ship but they were captured by British cruiser.

However, above revolutionaries were taken to Singapore. But the Indian spies of the British government, Bela Singh and Bhag Singh recognized Mangu Ram at Singapore. All of them were caught and handed over to the authorities. This mission also failed but party workers were full of courage.

But before the aforesaid significant and historic events took place, the First World War, broke out and a formal announcement about it was made on 4th August 1914.

Thousands of Indian patriots started donating their properties and other valuables to Yugantar Ashram (Ghadr Ashram) and began migrating to India. They used to sing patriotic songs full of rebellion on their way home in the manner as their companion Kartar Singh Sarabha used to sing his following song:

*Serving ones country is very difficult
It is so easy to talk
Anyone who walked on that path
Must endure millions of calamities.*

(Translated from Punjabi)

Role of 'Ghadr' Literature in the Revolution

The poems published in the Ghadr di Goonj had major impact on Indian patriots. The Ghadr (poetry collection) became more popular than even the Ghadr Party. The poems were in traditional folklore style. The patriotic zeal and the sharp militant appeal in these poems stirred the nationalists to the hilt. These carried the message of freedom of the country from the foreign yoke and at the same time conveyed the pitiable conditions of the Indians residing abroad.

The 'Ghadr di Goonj' apparently preached unity of Indian workers, patriots, students and religious personalities through poetry. The 'Ghadr di Goonj' (Poetry collection) issues Nos. 1, 2 and 3 were published under the banner of 'Voice of the Patriots'. 15,000 copies of the issue No.1 were published. The booklet was published from Yugantar Asharm and sent free of cost to foreign countries. The mailing address from where its copies could be asked for was: Editor, Hindustan Ghadr 5, Wood Street, San Francisco, California, United States of America.

Ghadr Movement Trial Cases

Leaders of the revolutionary movement and patriots were being arrested based on concocted reports, false witnesses and spying. They were tried in courts but no stress was given to defend them by advocates, through arguments or going in for appeal. It would be pertinent to give details in brief of some of the famous cases against the revolutionaries.

15 Ghadrites met with police encounter at Ghall Kalan, district Ferozpur. Two Ghadrites were killed on the spot, seven were arrested subsequently tried and hanged including Pandit Kanshi Ram. Mutiny broke out in the army stationed at Singapore on February 15, 1915. The mutineers were influenced by Ghadr Party. Latterly, they were captured by the British army. Forty one were publically shot dead. Out of them some hanged and many awarded different sentence.

The first, Lahore Ghadr Conspiracy Case 1915, 61 revolutionaries were arrested in this case. The tribunal awarded death sentence to 24 revolutionaries and 27 others were sent to Cellular Jail, Port Blair, Andamans. Out of the remaining, 6 were awarded less quantum of sentences and 4 were let off. Thereafter, Lord Hardinge himself visited Lahore. Exercising his special powers, he commuted the death sentence of 17 revolutionaries to transportation for life. Seven revolutionaries including Kartar Singh Sarabha, Harnam Singh, Jagat Singh Sur Singhwala and Vishnu Pingle were hanged till death in Lahore Central Jail on 16th November 1916.

The Second Lahore Conspiracy Case ended on 30th March 1916. In this case, five revolutionaries were awarded death sentence, 18 life imprisonment and 36 long and harsh prison terms. In the third, fourth and fifth Conspiracy Cases, decided in 1917 death sentences and life terms were announced. Properties were also ordered to be confiscated. Some more cases were presented before the same Tribunal in Lahore Central Jail. As per the details available about the criminal cases connected with the rebellion, 202 revolutionaries got martyrdom by hanging till death or were killed facing police bullets, 315 were given life imprisonment and were sent to Cellular Jail in Andaman and Nicobar islands. The number of those awarded lesser terms was 122.

Another world famous case of Ghadr Movement was Hindu German Conspiracy Case 1915. This was the costliest case of its times. Many Germans were involved in this case along with the Indians. The case was tried in the Northern District Court of California. As per the case diary and Department of Justice, Office of United States Marshal, Western District of Washington- Indians, Irish Republican Brotherhood and Germans jointly acquired a Annie Larsen ship on rent and sent it to India which carried 554 cases of rifles about seven or eight thousands (Carbines with bayonets), about 3773 cases of cartridges, making about 3,500,000 rounds, about ten packages of cartridge belts, about 200 or 300 to the packages and some forty five caliber pistols, and inspirational literature of the Ghadr Movement.

As discussed earlier, the patriotic revolutionaries connected with Annie Larsen and Maverick ships were five. One of them, Mangu Ram was hanged till death in Singapore by the government. According to the writings of Mangu Ram, he had read this news in the Manila Times. In fact, the government to save itself from the humiliation had hanged someone else whereas he was staying incognito in hiding with the aboriginals of the Philippines islands. What is more astonishing is that on 7th July 1917, the Northern District Court of California had issued warrants/summons against Mangu Ram and directed the Marshal to arrest him and present him before the Court. Another interesting fact was that according to the C.I.D. file on Mangu Ram, File No. 1273 of 1915, he was staying in the United States till September 1915. This file exposes the lethargy of the government intelligence department and the cleverness of the secret activities of the revolutionaries. Indiscriminate arrests of the Indians and the Germans began after the United States joined the British Alliance forces.

Revolutionaries Back to Homeland

Many revolutionaries returned to India by September 1914. Among all those revolutionaries who had gone to the United States and Canada, 90 percent were Sikhs. They started returning to homeland in batches. Thereafter they went to the war front. There were many Muslims, Hindus and those belonging to the so called low castes among the patriots.

The revolutionaries started preparing for rebellion in the whole of India, especially in North India. Ghadr Sandesha and Elan-e-Jung were published in thousands and distributed free in villages, cities and cantonments. The party headquarters was shifted from Amritsar to Lahore on 6th February 1915. A house was taken on rent for Bibi Gulab Kaur. She was responsible for keeping a tab and latest information about party bases and party activities.

Rebellion Day in India

At long last, it was decided on 12th February 1915 to mount a revolt on 21st February. The programme was to capture the cantonments of Mianmir and Ferozpur on that night. Parmanand, Kartar Singh Sarabha and Vishnu Ganesh Pingle visited Ambala, Meerut, Lucknow, Allahabad, Varanasi, Dinpur and Faizabad. Many more revolutionaries were involved in this planning. Meanwhile, a need was felt to have a national flag to fight against the British regime under one banner.

In the United States, blue and saffron colours were displayed at the Ghadr Ashram as the symbols of the Muslim and Hindu religions. Standing underneath it, they vowed to sacrifice their lives for getting freedom for the country. But later some changes were made in it. Through a resolution, it was decided to have red, yellow and green colours which chronologically represented Hindu, Sikh and Muslim religions. It was a symbol of unity for all.

In short, all the preparations were complete. But after the plunder in village Chabba on the night of 2nd February 1915, the entire planning went fut. Kala Singh who was arrested during the plunder revealed everything to the police. It became a talk of the town that the informer had put a death blow to the movement. But there were many other reasons for the failure of the revolution such as ill preparation for the attack, lack of contacts, tattling and many more.

Ghadr Party Foundation Day - 1913

The founder members of Ghadr movement who instilled a sense of Patriotism and the zeal for getting the country free were: Baba Sohan Singh Bhakna, Maulvi Barktulla, Pandit Kanshi Ram, Lala Har Dayal and Baba Kartar Singh Thathgarh. The Ghadr Movement has a unique, magnificent and significant revolutionary role in India's independence struggle. Even though the timing of its valiant, revolutionary and nationalist activities was much less but in the long run it became a solid foundation and a fountain of inspiration for the complete independence of the country. This movement gave many revolutionary brave persons who embraced the hanging noose smilingly to throw away the British rule out of the country. Martyrs Bhagat Singh, Rajguru, Sukhdev and many more are living example of this unparalleled sacrifice.

Founders of the Azad Hind Fauz were from Ghadr Party. Karam Singh, Daulatpur the founder of The Babbar Akali Movement was also a Ghadrite.

Despite all this, the Ghadr Movement has not received its due place of pride in the independence struggle so far. This fact also cannot be denied that the British government has in its archives voluminous files on the revolutionary Hindustan Ghadr Party and its revolutionary patriotic warriors.

One thing which is highly satisfying and is of great pleasure is that we have now acquired two important documents of the C.I.D. One of these is the Ghadr Directory, Punjab Section Volume IV, 1913-15 (and a Supplementary directory). It contains the names, addresses and information about 461 revolutionaries. The second one is the Ghadr Directory. It contains information about the revolutionaries connected with the Ghadr from the United States, Europe, Africa, Afghanistan and India. It has detailed information about 766 revolutionaries along with their names and addresses. Both these are based on true and false reports. The first Directory was issued in Lahore in 1916 and the second one in 1934. These were later published by Gobind Sadan, Mehrauli, New Delhi and Punjabi University, Patiala.

A Patriotic Memorial Desh Bhagat Yadgaar Kender is situated on the G.T. Road at Jalandhar in memory of the Ghadr Movement. Its large hall room adorns the photographs of valiant revolutionaries of the Ghadr along with captions. Its large library contains numerous historical books and documents relating to the Ghadr Movement. In the United States, some organizations are engaged in the proper upkeep of the documents relating to Ghadr Movement. These are: American Cultural Organization, California (America), Mother Heritage Foundation (America), Indo-American Heritage Forum (Frizino), Indo-American Patriotic Foundation, Folklore Institute, Berkeley, California and GOPIO, New York.

The Communications Ministry, Government of India issued postage stamps in memory of Lala Hardayal and Bhai Parmanand on 18th March 1987 and 24th February 1979 respectively. The Prime Minister of India, Dr. Manmohan Singh released a postage stamp on 8th January 2013 at Kochi (Kerala) to commemorate the Centuentry of the Ghadr Movement. He said that the Ghadr Memorial in San Francisco will be upgraded into a "functional museum and library with a sculpture to honour the heroes of the great movement." Now a portrait of Ghadr Hero, Kartar Singh Sarabha has been displayed in the Consulate General of Indian, San Francisco, U.S.A Patriots and historians believe that there is need to rewrite the history of India's freedom struggle to give its due place of pride to the Ghadr Movement. This would be a true compliment to the patriots and the revolutionaries of Ghadr Movement.
