State of the Economy

Recent Trends in India's Current Account Deficit

Prashant Prakash

Balance of Payments (BoP) for a country is a statistical statement that summarizes economic transactions between its residents and non-residents during a specific time period. In 2010-11, Reserve Bank of India shifted to the reporting pattern of International Monetary Fund's Balance of Payment and International Investment Position Manual 6 (BMP 6), which classifies BoP transactions as (i) current account (ii) capital account and (iii) finance account transactions. Current Account includes transactions under the heads "goods" (including general merchandise, non-official gold imports etc.), "services", "primary income" (including compensation of employees, investment income etc.) and "secondary income" (including personal transfers and remittances etc.). Also, while Capital Account transactions now include official transactions affecting economy's gold reserves (i.e. the gold owned by monetary authorities and held as a reserve asset), special drawing rights, financial claims and liabilities etc., Financial Account transactions include unrequited transfers like direct investments, portfolio investment, external commercial borrowings etc. It may be worthwhile to note here that Current Account transactions are sometimes also classified as "visible transactions" (including merchandise goods, non-official gold imports etc.) and "invisible transactions" (including "services" and "income") with visible transactions usually presenting "trade balance" of an economy at a given point of time. In the year 2011-12 and 2012-13, current account balance for India reached deficit levels of 4.6 % (US$ 78 billion) and 4.8 % of GDP (US$ 87 billion), mainly on account of a more specific "trade deficit" phenomenon arising from merchandise goods and gold trade deficits. Compared to Current Account Deficit (CAD) figures of 4.6% and 4.8% of GDP, India's trade deficits stood at 10.2% and 10.8% of GDP for the years 2011-12 and 2012-13. Also, usually "invisible" surpluses comprising "service" exports and "income" transfers like remittances from abroad have played a crucial role in evening out large trade deficits in India. The remaining CAD in turn have been getting financed by net capital inflows belonging to the financial account (capital account according to earlier BMP5 of IMF), although concerns about volatile nature of these inflows due to predominant share of portfolio investment have been expressed time and again. However, in recent times, while "invisibles" have remained stagnant, capital inflows have reduced significantly in the post financial crisis scenario. Given these basic trends in India's CAD and its financing pattern, detailed analysis of present CAD reveals oil, gold, coal and iron ore as some of the key contributors for the present situation. With a stockpile of 25000 tonnes and accounting for around a quarter of the world demand, gold imports in India increased from US$ 33 billion (in 2009-10) to US$ 57 billion (2011-12) and US$ 53 billion (2012-13). Share of gold in imports has also increased considerably from 7.6% (2005-06) to 12.6% (2011-12). Main reason for this phenomenon is said to have been the increase in global prices of gold in the post financial crisis scenario, as the world's savers looked for 'safe havens' to park their savings. Since 2005, gold price has doubled in terms of US$ and tripled in terms of Rupee. Surpassing returns on other investment, between 2007 and 2012, gold gave annual average returns of 23.7 % as compared to 7.3% by Nifty (National Stock Exchange in India) and 8.2% by Savings Deposits (Sehgal et al 2012, cited in Economic Survey 2012-13). In addition, it acts as a good hedge against inflation, which reduces real return on investments (inflation in India stood at 9.6% and 8.9% for the years 2010-11 and 2011-12 respectively). Hence, the recent spurt in gold demand and import by India is less about its historical affinity for consumption as jewelry and more about investment dynamics. Gold Loan schemes by Banking and Non-Banking Financial Companies (NBFCs) have further encouraged this demand. While in the year 2008, total gold loans stood at Rs 20,000 crore, the same stood

India's Growth- A Brief Analysis

Dharmakirti Joshi

The last decade has been truly remarkable as far as India's GDP growth performance is concerned. By growing at near 9 per cent per year during 2004-2008, India caught the global imagination and raised its stature significantly. India also displayed its resilience to the worst Global Financial Crisis (GFC) after the great depression of 1930s- by growing at 6.7 per cent during 2008-09 and swiftly returning to 9 per cent growth by 2010-11. But the sharp slowdown that set in after that is also a grim reminder that we are not immune to a sharp slide in growth if we become complacent with regard to addressing governance issues, fixing our infrastructure, slackening reform process and controlling inflation. The Indian economy grew at a decade low rate of 5 per cent in 2012-13 and prospects for the current fiscal year appear the same. Timely and well-distributed monsoon is the silver lining this year. Cumulative rainfall in this monsoon season was 5 per cent above normal. This will push the agricultural growth to an above trend rate of 4.5 per cent. But agriculture is only 14 per cent of India's GDP. The 86 per cent of the GDP (industry and services) is expected to grow at a slower pace than last year. Consequently, GDP growth will remain sub-par in 2013-14. This would have been regarded as a gross under-performance a few years back when the economy was growing at near 9 per cent. But today, achieving even 5 per cent growth appears challenging. While not much improvement is expected on the growth front in the short run, medium term expectations too have been revised downwards. The International Monetary Fund, for instance, has scaled down its Indian economy growth outlook to 5.7 per cent in 2013 6.5 per cent per year over the medium run (2013 to 2017). The target of 8 per cent GDP growth set by the Planning Commission for the 12th Plan period (2012-13 to 2016-17) appears out of reach. To achieve even 6.5 per cent growth during the current Plan period would require GDP growth of 7.5 per cent per year growth in the last three years of the Plan-which would be an uphill task. The reason behind India's slowdown can partly be attributed to a weak global environment. In a connected world, this is bound to happen. But the slide in growth is also due to domestic reasons. Today, the global economy is not shrinking as it did in 2009 (world GDP growth was -0.5 per cent in 2009). Rather, it is growing at around 2.5 per cent - but India's GDP growth is languishing at 5 per cent. What this means is that it is not global factors alone pulling India down. To put things in context it might be instructive to look at the factors behind the sharp pick-up in growth after the GFC. The growth surge in 2009-10 and 2010-11 was largely driven by stimulus-both monetary and fiscal. The interest rates were cut sharply and government spending expanded to create demand. The implementation of the sixth Pay Commission, which coincided with the GFC, also boosted growth. The stimulus helped revive growth, but also created macroeconomic imbalances. Interest rate cuts and consumption oriented spending created high inflation environment and burgeoning government spending led to an unsustainable fiscal situation. While this was happening, private investment climate did not improve. This had dampening impact on growth as almost three-fourths of India's GDP originates in the private sector. The stimulus had to be eventually withdrawn- what we are currently witnessing is rising interest rates to tame inflation and pull back in government spending to bring fiscal deficit under control. At the same time private investments are languishing and project pipeline has shrunk. In nut shell, when the stimulus was withdrawn, the private sector was not in a position to surge ahead independently. As a result India's growth came down sharply. There is little scope of reviving growth by cutting interest rates and increasing government spending and as private investments are yet to turn around the growth prospects remain muted. The policy needs to focus on creating investments and not consumption to combat inflation. Economic recovery, and its pace beyond 2013-14, will depend on the revival of private corporate investment. Investment revival in 2013-14 would require addressing policy-related issues impacting the implementation of ongoing projects, project announcements and funding challenges in the infrastructure sector due to leveraged balance sheets. Raising India's growth potential will also require fundamental reforms such as Good and Services Tax, transparent and predictable taxation policies, provision of labor market flexibility and resolving governance issues. Lastly, improving India's physical infrastructure and agricultural productivity will raise its ability to growth fast while keeping inflation low. Some quick wins can be achieved by sorting out mining issues and clearing the delayed projects. The government has announced steps to tame the fiscal deficit, speed up private investments through the formation of a Cabinet Committee, cleared the Pension Bill, made land acquisition more transparent and opened up the retail sector to direct foreign investments. These are all positive steps but may not be enough to address the current slowdown. (The author is Chief Economist, CRISIL Limited. E-mail : dharmakirti.joshi@crsil.com)

COOKING AS A CAREER OPTION

Do you love food? Are you passionate about cooking? Does your cooking bring a smile on the faces of your guests? Are the answers to these questions in the affirmative? Then, have you ever considered cooking as a career option? Take the plunge now. Today, culinary art is one of the most sought-after career options in the country. A chef is a culinary professional whose primary responsibility is to cook and present exotic dishes. As a chef, you will have to create a wide variety of foods like appetisers, snacks, salads, main dishes and desserts. Eventually, you will create your own recipes and design your menus. As you grow in your career, you will have to maintain the inventory for the kitchen, buy kitchen supplies, monitor the quality of food, reduce wastage and operate business. You will also have to hire and manage staff and inspire them to work efficiently.

Educational qualifications

Until recently, those aspiring to become a chef would take up a course in hotel management. This course is meant to impart skills required to produce food and perform the managerial and administrative tasks of the hospitality industry. Eventually, degree and diploma courses dedicated to catering technology and culinary arts developed. Today, the trend of pursuing these courses picked up well. Those aspiring to become chefs pursue these courses as they centre on culinary skills. These courses also provide extensive insights required to pursue a career in this field.

To begin your career as a chef, you need to undergo high level of training. The Bachelor's degree programmes cater to this requirement providing exposure to all aspects of food preparation. The curriculum is a careful mix of classroom sessions, practical training, guest lectures and industry internships. During the course, you will learn about a variety of cuisines, menus, food storage, kitchen equipment, knife techniques, nutrition, inventory and purchasing, and service etiquette. However, much of a chef's learning is through internship and on-the-job training. Despite completing a four-year course, you might spend time cleaning and peeling potatoes in the first year of your career!

Career prospects

After completing the course, you can seek jobs in restaurants, dining establishments, hotels, banquets, coffee shops, bakeries, caterers, airlines, cruise lines, hospitals, armed forces and educational institutions. Some of the top recruiters include ITC Hotels, The Taj Group, Oberoi, The Imperial, Marriott, The Leela, The Park, Lemon Tree Hotels and Four Seasons.

Based on your skills and experience, your starting salary could be between Rs. 15,000 to Rs. 30, 000. From a role such as junior executive chef, you progress in your career by assuming roles such as Executive Chef, Senior Executive Sous Chef, Sous Chef, Demi Chef de Partie and Commis. As Executive Chef, you would be overseeing the culinary operations of the restaurant and create the menu. When you assume the role of Sous Chef, you will undertake managerial and administrative tasks like hiring chefs and managing their work schedules. In the role of line chef, you will deal with specialised cooking such as baking.

After you gain some work experience, you can choose to work as a freelancer or as a consultant to restaurateurs. You can also start your own food service establishment.

Skill set

The job of a chef is not as easy as it seems. It is not simple as the TV programmes make it to be—working in a sophisticated kitchen to prepare a good meal! It involves a great deal of pressure and demands good physical and mental stamina. As a chef, you are expected to work for long hours, multi task, meet short deadlines, minimise wastage and still deliver the best dishes consistently.

You need to improve your memory and develop keen sense of taste and smell to be able to get your creations right. Willingness to learn, experiment and innovate is inevitable for success in this field. Apart from learning a range of cuisines, which include native and foreign, you have to discover your niche.

As you move up the hierarchy, your desire for perfection, interpersonal skills and leadership skills will keep you growing. However, at the end of the day, all these are worth the payback of being a part of the culinary industry.

Culinary art is one of the respectable professions these days. It is a fascinating, professionally satisfying and lucrative career option. The initial few years of your career may be tough, but as you gain work experience and skills, you will become no less than a celebrity. This profession helps you rise to fame within a short period. It allows you to be associated with some of the greatest hotels, events and celebrities. What is more, you can have your own shows and publish your own cookery books! So, what are you waiting for? If you think that you have it in you what it takes to become a great chef, enrol yourself in a good culinary institute and kick-start your career.

at Rs. 1,50,000 crore in the year 2012. In addition to these, other benefits associated with gold like liquidity, safe source for parking black money, saving instrument for rural areas lacking banking facilities etc. also continued to exert pressure on gold demand. However, though gold imports have been one of the main reasons for the present CAD, non-gold trade deficits also deteriorated sharply from US$ 96 billion (2010-11) to US$ 131 billion (2011-12) and US$ 144 billion (2012-13). Rising oil and coal import bills and reduced iron ore export earnings have been some of the main components for this trend. Oil bill continues to be one of main components on Indian import bill in light of the inelastic and growing energy demand and rising global crude prices due to exogenous factors like Middle East political economy and recent Arab Spring episodes. Studies have estimated that each US$ 10 per barrel change in crude price impacts current account balance in India by around US$ 8 billion.

For Coal, though possessing world's second largest coal reserves, India's import of the same has increased steadily from 20 million tonnes (mt) in 2001 to 74 mt in 2009 and 130 mt in 2012, resulting in an import bill of around US$ 18 billion. With around 60% to 70% of the country's electricity being generated from coal, imports are expected to increase further in future due to domestic production constraints.

As regards Iron Ore, while India exported 117 mt of iron ore in 2009-10, the figures saw a steep decline to 18 mt in 2012-13. With India expected to be a net importer of iron ore in 2013-14, this will mark a quick shift in India's position from being the third largest exporter of iron ore to a net importer over a very short period of time. Main reasons for this trend are said to have been a cap in production in Karnataka, ban in Goa and strict enforcement of environmental regulations in Odisha due to Supreme Court rulings and state interventions.

Given these diverse forces at play, an effective policy intervention to address present CAD has also to be necessarily multi-pronged. Also, with little room available for managing oil imports in the short run, present CAD management has to be through non-oil components only. While since January 2012, government has gradually raised import duty on gold from 2% to 10%, the same has been protested by gems and jewelry industry saying that it would adversely impact the Rs. 2,75,000 crore industry employing around 60 million people. Increased duty is also believed to have resulted in increased smuggling of gold. Hence, given the complexities involved and the time it might take to set the non-oil current account deficit to tune, government is exploring options to finance the same via long term stable finance account flows. Some of the options that have been recently suggested and tried include liberalization of Foreign Direct Investment policy, allowing PSUs to raise money abroad, continued attracting of sovereign wealth and pension funds to India, raising money from NRIs, and loosening of restrictions on borrowing by Indian companies abroad etc. Today, the external sector transactions amount to around 108% of GDP, as compared to around 30% of GDP for the year 1990-91. These figures point towards a more compelling need to diversify Indian exports, both destination wise and commodity wise. While it is always prudent to take lessons from history, every situation or challenge comes with its own peculiarities. Recent CAD trends in India have clearly shown that increased integration with the global economy brings with it both opportunities and challenges, and it is here that the role of government becomes most crucial to play a balancing act between these two tendencies.

Prime Minister's Visit to the United States- An Overview

Prime Minister Dr. Manmohan Singh visited United States from September 25 to 1st October 2013. During his visit, Prime Minister had bilateral meeting with the President of the United States of America Barack Obama, addressed the General debate on 68th session of United Nations General Assembly in New York and had bilateral meetings with the leaders of neighbouring countries including Bangladesh, Nepal and Pakistan. Prime Minister also addressed business leaders in New York.

Dr. Manmohan Singh and President Obama affirmed that the partnership between the two democratic nations is stronger today than at any point in its sixty-seven year history. In a joint statement both the sides applauded bilateral defence cooperation, including trade and military exercises. The Leaders reaffirmed their desire to further strengthen defence trade cooperation endorsing a Joint Declaration on Defence Cooperation as a means of enhancing their partnership in defence technology transfer, joint research, co-development and co-production.

Noting that two-way trade has increased fivefold since 2001 to nearly $100 billion, President Obama and Prime Minister Dr. Manmohan Singh agreed that there are no insurmountable impediments to bilateral trade increasing an additional fivefold. President Obama expressed confidence that the ongoing Indian economic reforms and policy measures to liberalize India's economy would accelerate economic growth, opening greater avenues for trade and creating jobs in both countries. In this respect, the Leaders recognized in particular the role and contribution of the Indian and U.S. Information Technology industry and the IT enabled service industry in strengthening India-US trade and investment relations.

In the civil nuclear power sector, President Obama and Prime Minister Singh noted that, with government-to-government procedures agreed, commercial negotiations between U.S. companies and the Nuclear Power Corporation of India (NPCIL) are proceeding. They welcomed the announcement that NPCIL and U.S. nuclear company

Westinghouse have concluded a Preliminary Contract to develop a nuclear power plant in Gujarat in India. Building on this, the Leaders urged NPCIL and U.S. companies Westinghouse and General Electric-Hitachi to expedite the necessary work to establish nuclear power plants in Gujarat and Andhra Pradesh. Both sides reaffirm their commitment to the full and timely implementation of the India-US Civil Nuclear Cooperation Agreement. The U.S.-India Partnership to Advance Clean Energy (PACE), launched by the two Leaders in 2009, is expected to pave the way for energy to millions of Indian households. To expand the availability of clean energy resources to more people, President Obama and Prime Minister Singh endorsed the proposal to launch Promoting Energy Access through Clean Energy (PEACE), a PACE initiative, to rapidly deploy innovative renewable energy solutions to those who currently lack access to energy.

On the issue of climate change, the two leaders agreed to immediately convene the India-U.S. Task Force on hydro fluorocarbons (HFCs) to discuss, inter alia, multilateral approaches that include using the expertise and the institutions of the Montreal Protocol to phase down the consumption and production of HFCs, based on economically-viable and technically feasible alternatives, and include HFCs within the scope of the United Nations Framework Convention on Climate Change (UNFCCC) and its Kyoto Protocol for accounting and reporting of emissions.

The two leaders also reviewed the international situation of South East Asia, Middle East and West Asia.

In his address in the General Debate of the 68th Session of the UN General Assembly, Prime Minister stressed the need of multilateral financial institutions facilitating an enhanced voice for developing countries in their decision-making structures. Multilateral efforts must guide our quest for peace and security, wherever they are threatened and the centrality and contribution of the UN system to development must be restored, he said.

Focussing on growth and inclusive development, the Prime Minister stated that they are naturally important for all countries and require a supportive international economic environment, enhanced investment flows, including from multilateral development banks, transfer of technology, and an open multilateral trading regime. Poverty remains a major political and economic challenge and its eradication requires special attention and a new collective thrust. This priority should anchor the post-2015 Development Agenda, which should be shaped by the member states so that it enjoys the broadest possible support and acceptance.

Speaking about efforts of government to promote inclusive development in the country, Prime Minister told the gathering that the issue is being addressed in multiple ways. Legislation has broadened access to education and secured rural livelihoods. India is building the world's largest programme for food security and digital technology is being harnessed to improve the delivery of public services and benefits to the people, he informed.

On issue of terrorism, the Prime Minister stated terrorism remains a grave threat to security and stability everywhere and extracts a heavy toll of innocent lives around the world. State-sponsored cross-border terrorism is of particular concern to India, also on account of the fact that the epicentre of terrorism in our region is located in our neighbourhood in Pakistan.

India is committed sincerely to resolving all issues with Pakistan, including the issue of Jammu and Kashmir, through bilateral dialogue on the basis of the Shimla Agreement. However, for progress to be made, it is imperative that the territory of Pakistan and the areas under its control are not utilized for aiding and abetting terrorism directed against India. It is equally important that the terrorist machinery that draws its sustenance from Pakistan be shut down. There must be a clear understanding of the fact that Jammu and Kashmir is an integral part of India and that there can never, ever, be a compromise with the unity and territorial integrity of India.

The increasingly complex challenges to international peace and security require a new international consensus to be built, whether it is in cyber security, non proliferation or terrorism. This year, 25 years after Prime Minister Rajiv Gandhi put forward a comprehensive Action Plan for a Nuclear Weapon-free and Non-violent World Order, we must strengthen efforts against nuclear proliferation and pursue time-bound, universal, non-discriminatory, phased and verifiable nuclear disarmament, he said.
