Educational Radio in India

Dr Ankuran Dutta & Dr Anamika Ray

In the contemporary world, we can undoubtedly say that radio is the most popular as well as powerful tools of dissemination of information and education. Radio has its unique value in the society. It provides a platform where members of a society can discuss their problems, issues and exchange views. It develops a sense of belonging among the members of a society. Therefore, Matt Mollgaard has rightly commented in his book Radio and Society: New Thinking for an Old Medium.

The MacBride Commission Report 'Many Voices One World' says, 'in developing countries, radio is the only medium that can really be labelled 'mass', where a large portion of the population can be reached by radio broadcasts and possess the means to receive them. No other medium now has the potential to reach so many people so efficiently for information, educational, cultural and entertainment purposes. Radio can be used easily and economically to reach outlying regions and for communication in the many vernacular- often unwritten- languages existing in developing countries.' Though this report was published in 1980 by the UNESCO, after long three decades, it may be claimed that still radio stands in its original position as the most vibrant communication tool globally. Especially for knowledge proliferation, radio is considered as the most effective weapon. Radio has the power to bring the world to the classroom, and programs could be presented as textbooks of the air. Radio is used as an effective and interesting tool in education both for formal and informal education. Where conditions have permitted, it has become well established and wide spread; yet, it seems to us that insufficient educational use is made of this virtually universal method of distribution.

Radio programs emphasized contemporary progressive ideas on education and progressive political notions that were not represented in schoolbooks at that time. Educational radio programs is regarded as an important way to influence individual children and adolescents when they had problems or needed guidance in societal matters. Radio was also used to inculcate new notions of citizenship. In Europe the French state broadcasting service devotes more than one-half of its radio output to educational and cultural broadcasts in the arts, letters, and sciences educational programming accounts for about 4 percent of radio time in Australia.

Radio has been extensively used as an educational medium in developing countries like India, Sri Lanka, Thailand, South Korea, Mali, Guatemala, Botswana, South Africa, Zambia, Uganda, Mexico, Philippines and also proved its impact and efficiency in health, agriculture and other development issues.

In India, the All India Radio is the pioneer in the field of educational broadcasting. Radio came to India through amateurs with educational purpose first in 1923 in a small way and after four years it could find its root here. Since its inception, AIR has been serving the nation with its array of programmes and services. The contribution of AIR in popularizing classical and folk music, news services, extension educational programmes like rural broadcasting, educational programmes, programmes for the youth and the family planning programmes, external services directed to foreign countries are the most worth mentioning. Educational programmes of AIR cover a wide spectrum of primary, secondary, tertiary and university levels. Enrichment programmes are also broadcast for teachers.

Education was first taken up by Radio in January, 1929 in Bombay on an occasional and informal way to be followed at Madras next year in April, school broadcast was started with a view to educate the unprivileged pupils. But in November, 1937 All India Radio, Calcutta took up educational broadcast in a systematic and regular manner on getting requests from University of Calcutta and Education Department of Bengal Government.

If we discuss on the growth and development of the educational radio in India, a few landmark projects may be remembered. The first such project was the School Broadcast Project of 1937. It was experimented in four metro cities of the country. The Adult Education and Community Development Project was commenced in 1956. With the UNESCO, this project was tried out in 144 villages of Maharashtra. It was the first most successful educational programme broadcast by All India Radio. The Farm and Home Broadcast project was administered in 1966 to provide all necessary information on agriculture and allied topics.

The first higher education programme was aired under the University Broadcast Project, which was initiated in 1965, with an aim to expand higher education as widely as possible among the different strata of society. The programmes were prepared by the School of Correspondence Studies of the University of Delhi and the CIEFL, Hyderabad for the All India radio. The another project 'Language Learning Project' was commenced in 1979-80. It was a joint venture of the AIR and the Education department of the Rajasthan Government to teach Hindi to the school going children as first language in 500 primary schools.

In Asia, the 44 radio and TV universities in China (including the China Central Radio and Television University), Universities Terbuka in Indonesia, and Indira Ghandi National Open University have made extensive use of radio and television, both for direct class teaching and for school

Career in Rural Development

Dr. Anupam Hazra

The Government of India has been giving top priority to rural development. However, in the absence of well planned development programs and efficient delivery systems, most of these resources do not benefit the target groups. It has been reported that only 18% of the rural development budget reaches the target families, while the rest is wasted due to inefficient delivery systems or drained out. As a result, the pace of progress has remained stunted and the poor continue to suffer. After six decades of Independence, agricultural growth remains anaemic, farmers are trapped in poverty, the poor prefer urban slums to stagnant villages and the rural communities lack basic facilities like schools and health centres. As the rural development is a prerequisite for overall development it deserves the highest priority in terms of allocation of resources. When "poverty", "un-employment" and "inequality" situations are grim in a country it must be presumed that there is dire need for the development and policies and plans for the same must be made accordingly to alleviate the poverty and improve the standard of living of the masses. Even in these days of cutting-edge technological advancements and the boom in the industrial sector, a large section of India's population is still dependent on agriculture for a living. Hence, the rural development sector continues to attract the investment of a considerable amount of resources. Developmental process without inclusion of rural India is thus lopsided and unsustainable. India's development lies in the development of its villages. The gamut of Rural Development encompasses a wide range of issues, approaches and actors. The successful implementation of various programmes to achieve the objective of the sustainable development requires knowledge and skills in planning, execution, monitoring and evaluation of rural development programs and at the same time, it requires enough awareness among the rural poor regarding the various Government programs and schemes – which are exclusively designed and being implemented for them. So here lies the need of rural development professionals who are well trained with required skills, knowledge and experiences, committed for the upliftment of the rural poor. Besides that, not only Government but also many voluntary agencies, corporate bodies and private companies are also supporting rural development and rural management. Thus, it is quite natural that Rural Development or Rural management [Rural Development/Management] has a dazzling career options to those who are deeply concerned for a rural nation's holistic and sustainable growth and development. Rural Development from a mission has gradually changed to a profession and recently various educational institutes have come forward to offer professional courses in Rural Development/Management in order to prepare skilled and committed rural development professionals.

broadcasting, to reach more of their respective large populations. For these institutions, broadcasts are often accompanied by printed materials and audio cassettes. For the distant learners of the country, the landmark initiative was taken by the Indira Gandhi National Open University in 1992 after the University Broadcast Project of the University of Delhi. The Mumbai, Hyderabad and Shillong stations of the All India Radio were started broadcasting of the IGNOU programmes. The first interactive radio counselling was started in 1998 by the AIR with the initiative of IGNOU. It was a grand success in the educational broadcasting history in India. Likewise, K K Handiqui State Open University, Assam started an interactive radio phone in programme, once in a month from the beginning of the academic activities of the university in 2008.

Gyan Vani is the first and only dedicated educational radio in India. After the success of the Gyandarshan programme on Doordarshan, the Indira Gandhi National Open University was planning to introduce independent FM bands in 40 stations under the programme named Gyan Vani. It is an educational FM Radio network providing programmes covering different aspects and levels of education including Primary and Secondary Education, Adult Education, Technical and vocational Education, Higher Education and Extension Education. Gyan Vani, launched in November 2001 is an educational FM Radio channel operated through FM stations from various places in the country. With 10 FM stations at Allahabad, Bangalore, Coimbatore, Visakhapatnam, Mumbai, Lucknow, Bhopal, Kolkata, Chennai and Delhi already on air, the network is slated to expand to a total of 40 stations. Gyan Vani stations operate as media cooperatives, with the day-to-day programmes contributed by various educational institutions, institutes, NGOs, government and semi-government organisations, UN agencies, Ministries such as Agriculture, Environment, Health, Women and Child Welfare and Science and Technology, etc.

In Assam, the regular broadcasting of educational programme was first aired by Akashvani, Guwahati on April 18, 1960 at 1.10 pm with the name of the programme was 'Vidyarthi Anusthan' (programme for students).

There are three general approaches to the use of radio in education. First of all broadcast may be the substitute of teacher in class room. Secondly, providing teaching-learning materials through broadcast system; and thirdly, general educational programming over community, national and international stations which provide general and informal educational opportunities. IRI can be the best example in this context. Interactive Radio Instruction (IRI) consists of "ready-made 20-30 minute direct teaching and learning exercises to the classroom on a daily basis. The radio lessons, developed around specific learning objectives at particular levels of maths, science, health and languages in national curricula, are intended to improve the quality of classroom teaching and to act as a regular, structured aid to poorly trained classroom teachers in under-resourced schools." IRI projects have been implemented in Latin America and Africa. In Asia, IRI was first implemented in Thailand in 1980; Indonesia, Pakistan, Bangladesh and Nepal rolled out their own IRI projects in the 1990s. Farm school on air as a method of communicating distant education on farming has been adopted by many AIR stations in its early period of broadcasting. Besides imparting technical and other information, the thrust of the broadcasts are dissemination of information relating to ways and means for increased production of vegetables and fruits etc; diversification of agriculture, social forestry, preservation of environment and farm forestry; poverty alleviation schemes, health and sanitation etc.; adult education programmes and role of panchayats in rural development. Interactive broadcasts like the Phone-in-Programme, Radio Bridge and Voice Mail, apart from people's forum programmes, are recent innovations in AIR broadcasting. In the Phone-in-Programme on education, people call to the station on a given telephone number at the time of broadcast and ask questions regarding their queries on education and the experts at the broadcasting stations reply to their queries immediately.

Using radio in educational system can promote the confidence level of the learners, which can raise the academic standard as whole. On the other hand it enables the teachers to share their views and ideas related to increasing academic performance. It opens the way to enable the teachers to assess their teaching qualities. It not only encourages the competition among the learners but also motivate the teachers for constructive competition. It offers the exposure to learners to an educational environment beyond the classroom which was strongly emphasised by Gurudev Rabindranath Tagore 'Where the mind is without fear and the head is held high; where knowledge is free; where the world has not been broken up into fragments by narrow domestic walls'.

Rural Development/Management course aims at providing basic knowledge of rural development and equipping the students with basic skills and tools used in the field of rural development. The basic objectives are: (1) To acquaint the students with the basic elements of rural development and major issues of rural India (2) To develop perspective building on India's rural scenario, development trajectory, challenges and prospects (3) To introduce the students to multidimensional aspects of the rural life of India (4) To develop skills of writing proposal for rural development projects (5) To enhance skills sets on participatory techniques, micro planning and Decision Support systems with a comprehensive understanding of natural, social and economic resources.

The discipline of Rural Management was introduced at the Institute of Rural Management, established in 1979 at Anand (Gujrat) with the active support of the Central and State Governments, the National Dairy Development Board, and the Indian Dairy Corporation. Apart from classroom teaching-learning process, students of rural development courses are given exposure of carrying out different developmental projects/ visits to the development organisations, agricultural fields, in villages, in forests, in the operational areas of the voluntary organizations as a part of their course curriculum – which make them capable enough to serve as a committed and well-trained development professionals for ensuring a sustainable growth of the nation. Until a few years ago, MBA degree with specialization in rural management was considered as one with less scope. But now Rural Management, which encompasses rural development, is one of the major areas of management studies. Rural Development or Rural Management as a profession is gradually gaining popularity with more and more competent professionals are joining it as their career and also because of the increasing number of educational institutions offering professional courses in this field.
