JOBS APLENTY IN AUTOMOBILE INDUSTRY

The Indian automobile industry has witnessed rapid changes in the past few years. Automobile companies in India, both indigenous and foreign, are now focussed on changing their processes and technologies, to produce better products and increase their market share. With this, the demand for skilled automobile engineers has increased. According to the Economic Survey 2011-12, automobile industry is at the third position in the ranking of top hirers for the one-year period ending September 2011. Automobile engineering as a career option holds promising prospects for professionals in this field.

Automobile engineering is a combination of elements from different branches of engineering like mechanical, electrical, electronics, safety, and computer science. It deals with design, manufacture, testing, and maintenance of automobiles. It begins by creating a concept on paper; includes designing, selecting, and using appropriate components for building the vehicle, testing and qualifying the product at various stages. It also includes conducting crash tests to ensure and improve safety, providing servicing to the sold vehicles and extends to constantly improving or updating vehicles according to the market requirements.

Jobs:

Automobile industry constitutes companies that manufacture bikes, scooters, motorcycles, autos, cars, trucks, tractors, defence vehicles and buses. Some top players in the field are Maruti, Tata Motors, Mahindra & Mahindra, Ashok Leyland, Hindustan Motors and Bajaj Auto, Hyundai, Ford, Fiat, Toyota, Honda, Skoda, Volkswagen, Audi, Renault and BMW. Automobile industry, along with automobile component industry provides a variety of job roles to competent automobile engineers. Job opportunities are in areas like design, engineering, production, operations, human resource management, sales and services, marketing, finance, customer care, IT and R&D. Jobs in automobile industry can be classified into three main domains – Design, Development and Manufacturing. Design deals with preparing a blue print of the vehicle or component. Development engineers assess the blue print. Manufacturing engineers are concerned with production of the vehicle. Some roles automobile engineers can assume are Automobile Designer, Production Engineer, Driver Instrumentation Engineer, Quality Engineer, Automotive Technician, and Paints Specialist and Supplier Warranty Recovery Specialist.

Apart from automobile manufacturing companies and automobile component companies, service stations, and transport companies hire automobile engineers. IT companies handling projects related to automobile software also hire these professionals provided they have completed a software course or after providing them relevant training. Setting up maintenance workshops or garages is another option. Research and pedagogy are some the other options. Some areas of research in automobile engineering field are aerodynamics, alternative fuels, chassis, electronics, emissions, ergonomics, manufacturing,

Remuneration:

A fresh graduate in automobile engineering can earn Rs.10,000 to Rs.15,000 per month. Pay packages for students from reputed institutes like IITs, NITs, and BITS are much higher.

Academics:

Courses in automobile engineering are offered from diploma to Ph.D. Students keen on pursuing a career in the field of automobiles can begin with a BE or B.Tech course in Automobile Engineering or take up BE or B.Tech in Mechanical Engineering and later do M.Tech in Automobile Engineering. Some of the topics covered in Automobile Engineering course are thermodynamics, aerodynamics, electrical motion, combustion engine, vehicle chassis, electric systems, control systems, fluid mechanics, emissions, workshop technology, a car on hoists, changing air filter, fuel filter, engine oil, spark plugs, fixing tyre punctures to working with designing software and assembling components, etc. Some successful students reveal that mechanics can offer tips that are sometimes unknown to experienced automobile engineers!

Certificate and diploma courses are available in Engineering Mechanics, Applied Thermodynamics, Mechanical Engineering, Robotics and Automation, etc.

Diploma holders can take the AMIE exam conducted by the Institution of Engineers, India. This professional certification is treated on par with the Bachelor's degree.

Skills:

A strong background of Mathematics and Science is imperative to do well in automobile engineering course. Innovation is the key for success in the field of automobile engineering. So, logical thinking, objective approach, hardworking nature and persistence are some traits, candidates looking forward to a career in this field should inculcate.

Apart from sound technical skills including sketching and drawing skills, they need good communication skills, team working and team leading skills, and problem solving skills to do well in their jobs. Willingness to learn and network of contacts help in progressing in this field.

There are a few institutions offering courses in automobile engineering. There is a scarcity of skilled engineers to fill various positions in automobile companies. So, the future is bright for candidates who are really passionate and committed to pursuing a career in this field.
