SAROJINI NAIDU ON WOMEN'S EDUCATION

On 15th of August every year, we remember various people who fought for our freedom and upliftment of our society as a whole. Sarojini Naidu was a front runner in the struggle for political liberation and also an untiring champion of women's rights.

From the archives of Yojana, we present below the excerpts of her speech in Calcutta (now Kolkata) on 16th January 1907, which reflect her thoughts on women's education which are relevant in our society even today.

"In moving this resolution I beg to make a slight amendment and substitute the word Indian for Hindu for education knows no distinction of caste or creed or province. It seems to be a paradox, at once touched with humour and tragedy, that on the very threshold of the 20th century it should still be necessary for us to stand upon public platforms and pass resolutions in favour of what is called female education in India of all places in India which, at the beginning of the first century was already ripe with civilisation and has contributed to the world's progress radiant examples of woman of the highest genius and widest culture.

But, by some irony of evolution and paradox stands to our shame, it is time for us to consider how best we can remove such a reproach, how we can best achieve something more fruitful than the passing of empty resolutions in favour of female education from year to year.

At this great moment of stress and striving, when the Indian races are seeking for the ultimate unity of a common national ideal, it is well for us to remember that the success of the whole movement lies centred in what is known as the woman question. It is not you but we who are the true nation-builders".

TECHNOLOGY FOR RURAL DEVELOPMENT

– Vijay Pratap Singh Aditya

India is facing gigantic challenges being a young nation and in creating useful occupation for the increasingly educated-unemployed young population. Our support institutions and policy makers views are archaic; particularly so in agriculture which remains the largest employer particularly for the majority of population still living in villages. Farm productivity is low, supply chain losses are amongst the highest in the world, income from agriculture for the household is coming down, interest in agriculture is going down and farmers are migrating for better employment opportunities in fast growing cities. While policy makers have acknowledged that agriculture extension system has collapsed in India today, new challenges have emerged for the sector, especially climate variability, soil, globalised markets, reducing ground water table besides many others. Given the scenario, the envisioned second green revolution needs much more to be done than wishful thinking. Getting the rural youth back to agriculture and making agriculture a gainful employment opportunity cannot be done without effective use of technology and aid and much needed long delayed land reforms to encourage investment in agriculture and its value chain.

India is often called a land of paradox, we are the largest producers of the food in the world along with largest food market, given these facts it would be obvious for an analyst to presume that such a market would be well organised. Interestingly enough the entire sector is grossly unorganised, lacking basic infrastructure, institutional financing of value chain, huge wastage and poor productivity, leading to high food inflation; benefits of which never reaches the poor producers, perpetuating indebtedness and poverty.

The paradox continues in education; India's institutes of higher learning produce approximately 3.1 million graduates every year. India currently has around 347 institutes of higher learning and 16,885 colleges with a total enrollment of over 9.9 million. These institutes produce around 495,000 technical graduates, nearly 2.3 million other graduates and over 300,000 post-graduates every year. India also produces largest number of agriculture graduates from its universities in the world, interestingly enough 95% of these graduates do not work in agriculture.

To absorb over a million young graduates every year coming from education system, driven by high aspiration from life in an increasingly globalised world through media and internet, the jobs being created by economy is less than a quarter of the number, let alone providing opportunity of choice.

Rural youth is further disadvantaged. Most of them form part of the educated class, 70% whom our industry labels as "not employable".

Growth of industry and service sector in proportion to the demand for employment is lacking severely inspite of India being one of the fastest growing economies in the world. The last resort remains 'self employment' for these millions. Unfortunately for this vision, policy and support framework are severely lacking. More than the urban entrepreneur, the rural entrepreneur is disadvantaged with virtually non-existent incentive in primary level value chain of agriculture.

Institutional financing is negligible. Lack of enthusiasm, encouraged by weak policy framework make the young who venture out frustrated, creating a recipe for discontent.

The Village, Agriculture and Livelihood

Social unity of a village has always got underplayed in the larger development debate owing to considerable lack of economic development and opportunities, creating greater disparity and fight for limited resources. Increasing pressure of markets and years of shift in the production system from a food source to income source has led to loss of traditional practices associated with farming and soil management. This loss has been substituted by high input base agriculture predominated by chemical fertiliser and pesticide as a source for soil

CORRIGENDUM

Reference advertisement and corrigendum appeared in 'The Tribune (English)', 'Hindustan Times', 'Ajit', 'Amar Ujala' and 'Employment News' on dated 26.05.2012, 30.05.2012 & 11.07.2012 respectively inviting applications for filling up the posts of Staff Nurses in GMCH-32 Chandigarh and GMSH-16, Chandigarh. This is for information of all the applicants who are applying for the post of Staff Nurse, that the backlog of Scheduled Caste, is because of 3% enhancement in the reservation since 2005 onwards and not because of non availability of candidates in the previous selections in GMCH. Similarly there is also backlog of OBC vacancies. The backlog of SC and OBC posts will be filled up first during the current selection and these SC/OBC candidates shall stand senior to the other candidates. Thus the Number of seats in various categories now are as follows :-

Total posts 358

nutrient and pest protection. However, while agri-input have made inroads into farm practice; farm advisory services for the new crops have not. Small and marginal farmers are the ones who are hit more by this changing situation, having no access to formal source of education/inputs on better crop management practices for new crop varieties required by the market. Most farmers get advise from hearsay or peer group.

Even after globalization, economic reforms, liberalization, the real India lives in villages with over 65% population of a billion plus people. 70% of farmers operate under 1 hectare (ha), and are severely resource constrained increasing their dependence on the crop as major source of livelihood. The average farm size is 1.06 ha but average area owned is only 0.72 ha per rural household as per National Sample Survey Office, 2003. With property rights and family divisions, the land sizes continue to go smaller. The land sizes have become so small that gainful employment cannot be sought from them even if farm productivity increases significantly. Livelihood diversification is need of the time.

Given this state of rural economy, rural migration (although MGNREGA have had some impact on limiting this migration temporarily) has been highest in past decade owing to lack of livelihood opportunities in villages. Agriculture being uneconomical due to increased input costs; the benefits of food inflation do not pass on to the for gainful employment from uneconomical agriculture in the villages. While development for these cities is desirable, over-population and unplanned development is not, as most of these migrants are unable to afford living costs, they seek settlements which are illegal and do not have basic amenities. These settlements create problems of law enforcements, local population and city administrators.

Hoping or even envisioning a substantial shift of this 70% population from rural countryside to cities might be visionary, but considering the experiences of China, USA & Russia such shift is not desirable while also not sustainable. Creating opportunities in villages for rural youth for gainful employment and good life is a better and wiser alternative.

Technology Enabled Development

Many issues of rural countryside and population cannot find solution through short-term policy changes, but can give a considered outlook towards issues facing rural populations. While infrastructure in the form of rural roads (Pradhan Mantri Sadak Pariyojana), electricity and housing (mostly through remittance money) are improving, options and opportunity for livelihoods are not. Rural youth who have migrated to cities in the hope of better life have not found grass green on this side as well; bad living and work conditions and a bad economy have encouraged most to evaluate other options. However, villages do not offer livelihood alternatives that the youth can willingly choose, given that agriculture alone cannot give (in the given circumstances) gainful employment.

has transformed into a ubiquitous device enabling not just communication but with it an entire ecosystem.

Mobile phones have penetrated into the deepest areas of the country where electricity or road has not reached. Besides indirect benefits, it has created employment for entrepreneurs who have opened shops serving customers for recharging talk time, ringtones, battery charging, phone sales and repair etc. An industry estimate suggests that there are over a million rural entrepreneurs (not necessarily mobile network operators agents) providing these services earning upto 1500 – 4000 INR per month.

Voice and data services enabled by mobile communication is just one of the many technology enablers which can create employment opportunities. However, it requires an enabling environment for creating viable business opportunities. It took Indian locomotive sector over 60 years to come up with a cheaper mode of transport in the form of 'Tata Magic' a low cost comfortable transport vehicle for rural and sub-urban markets, even when local 'Jugad' was existing. The ecosystem change in this case was better rural roads as well as increased demand due to migration. Rural entrepreneurs lapped on to the 'Tata Magic' for its low cost and utility value, and for Tata's the vehicle turned into "Magic" with increased sales and profits. Market based alternatives are needed to bring about the change needed for rural livelihoods to improve, for which enabling ecosystems needs to be invested in. These enabling ecosystem are land-reforms (clear land ownership rights), incentives for businesses for investing in primary value chain in agriculture (at farm gate), storage and cold-store infrastructure, logistics and most important tax breaks and financing mechanism for each of these value chain necessities to un-lock market value of the sector. These reforms would provide incentive for investments to flow in agriculture sector and allow micro-entrepreneurs to cash in on the opportunity for creating primary level value addition based enterprises, creating employment opportunities and generating income. Information technology (IT) and communication aided by the power of mobile telecommunications can enable the access of information and services to stakeholders.

Precedent of creating right enabling environment already exist in the form of dairy revolutions led by GCCMF (popularly known as Amul). Replicating Amul success is not the solution, we already know that such efforts for oilseed, trees and host of other sectors failed. The need is to bring about systemic changes, unleash entrepreneurship and believe in the power of the youth to bring about the change we seek to see in our villages.... it can change and IT can change.

producers, perpetuating indebtedness and hence migration.

Indian cities are in throngs of development. Much of the labour supplied for this rapid development is by the rural 'seasonal' migrants looking

Right set of measures, support policies, enabling environment and incentive for markets aided by technology can enable opportunities in rural settings. A case in point is mobile phones which at one point was considered an egalitarian utility, but
